Italy Adds 14,000 Men To Africa Army, Waits Geneva Development

Record Day's Transport Puts Expeditionary Army at 179,000.

'No-Retreat' Stand Stressed by Action

Cabinet Is Expected to Reject Any Plan Save Military Control.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Sept. 15.—Italy fitted action today to her cabinet's cry of "no compromise" and sped nearly 14,000 more Blackshirts toward East Africa on six ships—a record single day's embarkation.

An intensive week of war preparations began with 12,000 men of the Assietta and Cosseria Divisions sailing from Genoa on the Sannio, the Italia, the Aquileia and the Calabria.

The steamers Quirinale and Atlanta left Naples crammed with 82 officers and 1,664 Blackshirts.

The hospital ship Urania also sailed from Naples with 350 sanitary attendants.

Today's sailings brought the total of troops sent to East Africa on regular transports to 164,000, while 30,000 workmen and about 15,000 troops have embarked on coastal ships and tramp steamers carrying war materials.

Action Expected.

In Rome's political and diplomatic circles it was believed the week would see decisive developments in the Ethiopian situation. These observers were certain the League of Nations committee of five would report at Geneva with its compromise solution of the quarrel, and they were just as sure that if the committee reports before Wednesday the Italian cabinet, called into session on that day, would reject the proposal unless it contained an unexpected provision for Italian military control over Emperor Haile Selassie's nation. The cabinet, meeting yesterday, refused in advance any "compromise solution."

There was a growing uneasiness here that some serious frontier incident, might precipitate momentous events before the end of the Ethiopian rainy season, which is

Navy Air Crash Inquiry Opened

Wreckage Found With Two Victims Inside, on Beacon Hill, N. Y.

By the United Press.

Beacon, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Investigation into the fatal crash of a Navy reserve plane late last night which claimed the lives of a pilot and mechanic, was started tonight by a naval board of inquiry.

The plane, of the helldiver type, was found by searchers early this morning on lonely Beacon Mountain. It was in the same territory that an American Airways plane crashed last summer killing seven persons.

Scores of volunteers, augmented by State police and local authorities had tramped the thickly wooded section throughout the night. A dense fog blanketed the area, making the search hazardous.

The plane, en route to Floyd Bennett Field from the Albany airport, was piloted by Lieut. L. C. Denton, with Charles Hart as mechanic. The wreckage was found about a mile from the top of Beacon Mountain. Bodies of both men were in the badly damaged plane. It had not exploded or burned.

Denton and Hart, flying southward with another plane as convoy, apparently became lost in the fog. The other plane reached its destination. Meanwhile, State police began an immediate check to learn the whereabouts of the plane.

The inquiry board, meeting in secret session, began by taking testimony, questioning persons who reported hearing the crash and visiting the scene of the accident.

Lieut. Comdr. Julius Neuberger, New York City, headed the board.

Somebody Wanted It!

George H. Amerein, of 1109 11th street northwest, was about to junk his 1928 Chevrolet. It was still running, to be sure, "But who would want a car as old as that?" thought Mr. Amerein.

An advertisement in the Classified Columns of The Post soon let him know there were scores of persons who wanted it. And much to his surprise, Mr. Amerein realized $20 on what he thought was junk.

Vital Test in League's Fight To Curb Italy Due This Week

Latest Developments at Geneva and Rome Indicate Crucial Decision on Sanctions in Case of War Will Come Up Thursday or Friday.

Copyright, 1935, by United Press.

Geneva, Sept. 15.—The League of Nations will face its greatest crisis this week. Week-end developments in Rome and Geneva assure the vital test within 24 to 48 hours after the League Council meets Wednesday to receive the report of its committee of five.

Premier Benito Mussolini's clear rejection of "compromise solutions" made the desperate efforts of the five-power sub-committee to whip together peace proposals today scarcely more than a mockery.

Nevertheless, these forms are necessary in order that the issue between Italian Fascism and the rising tide of League opposition be clear-cut.

The sub-committee will draft its final report for submission to the main committee Monday. The report is expected to embody 12 proposals which are tantamount to a questionnare to Italy and Ethiopia asking the former, in effect, how little she will accept in lieu of war and the latter how much she will offer to escape war.

The Council will reconvene formally Wednesday and approve the report of the committee of five for immediate submission to Italy. In view of Italy's "no compromise" edict issued by the cabinet Saturday, Mussolini is expected to turn down the 12-point proposals forthwith. That will face the Council for the first time officially with the issue of Italy's refusal to conciliate. The next step is the consideration of penalties to be imposed upon Italy if she attacks Ethiopia.

It is on the issue of application of economic and military sanctions under the covenant that the League faces its vital test. The covenant is clear on the point. If Italy is allowed to gobble up Ethiopia, a League member, without punishment, the Geneva collective security structure will collapse like a house of cards.

Minor countries—have expressed themselves verbally as supporting the Covenant—and the Covenant provides for sanctions. Nevertheless, concentrated study and negotiations is expected to precede definite commitment of any of these nations on the specific question of sending a League army to disarm Mussolini.

The probable form of such a League force would include action

Red Cross Delegates Are Welcomed at Rio

Rio de Janeiro, Sept. 15.—President Getulio Vargas today welcomed delegates from 19 American nations to the third Pan American Red Cross conference. A chorus of 400 voices, singing the anthem, "Pan America," opened the glittering ceremonies.

Delegates were moved by addresses of the Paraguayan and Bolivian delegates, who described the work of their national organizations on Chaco battlefields. A message was read from Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, president of the United States organization, regretting his inability to attend.

Russian Troops Drop From Sky To 'Attack' Foe

Air Darkened as Regiments in Parachutes Land Back of 'Enemy' Lines.

By the Associated Press.

Kiev, Sept. 15.—Soviet military strategists dropped an army from the sky today as they practiced their latest war maneuver—mass landing of fully equipped troops with parachutes.

The air was darkened with jumpers bearing rifles and submachine guns. They landed behind "enemy" lines, formed ranks quickly and bore down upon an opposing airdrome.

Whole regiments, landing from the skies, succeeded in capturing the airdrome, but later came to theoretical grief. When they used the airdrome as a base from which to advance overland to attack the main "enemy" forces from the rear they were met by a qnickly mobilized defense force which, with the aid of tanks and armored trains, "annihilated" them.

Leap From Transport Planes.

The sky army dropped from squadrons of big transport airplanes, each of which carried 30 jumpers. Gripping their rifles and submachine guns, the soldiers leaped one after another, pulled their ripcords and floated slowly to land. Once on the ground they freed themselves from their parachutes, which they abandoned on the field.

The landing was effected in daylight and was caught by a battery of cameras. One of the pictures showed 358 jumpers in the air at once.

War Commissar Voroshilov and the military missions of France, Italy and Czechoslovakia witnessed the operations.

'Chute Fails, Flier Dies.

Mexico, City, Sept. 15 (AP).—Sub-Lieut. Carlos Paulladas fell to his death at the Military Airport today when he attempted a double parachute jump during Independence Day ceremonies. Thirty thousand persons saw the tragedy. The military flier's first parachute opened but when he attempted to use his second it became tangled in his legs and failed to work.

Crashes Take Three Lives On Sabbath

Eleven Are Injured in Nearby Maryland and District.

Taxi Hurtles Into Tree After Hitting Car Near Annapolis.

Death rode yesterday over the roads of the District and nearby Maryland, taking a toll of three. Eleven persons were injured, three seriously.

The dead are:

Frank Russell, 37, of 62 I street northwest

Mrs. Fanny Arnold, 35, of the 400 block of H street northwest. She was reported to have moved here recently from Fish Dam, Tenn.

Charles Stewart, 55, colored, of Clinton, Md.

Taxi Hits Trees.

Russell and Mrs. Arnold were killed when the taxicab in which they were riding crashed into some roadside trees after sidewiping another car on General's highway, 14 miles from Annapolis, while returning from a dance at Herald Harbor.

Injured in the same accident were Mrs. Irma Recla, 704 Third street northwest, who is in Emergency Hospital, Annapolis. Her condition is serious. Her injuries are fractures of the left forearm, left thigh and ribs; internal injuries and head injuries. Her husband, police said, is an inmate of Walter Reed Hospital.

Also in the hospital is Ernest Dodd, 25, of 1326 Twelfth street northwest, who has a fracture of the left foot. Police said he was the driver of the taxicab.

Got Job Recently.

Russell lives here with his two children, Dorothy, 12, and Okey, 9. He is estranged from his wife who lives somewhere in West Virginia.

Russell and the children had been on relief rolls until three weeks ago when he obtained a job as a pipefitter at the L. P. Steuart Co. Saturday night he started out to celebrate his good fortune at getting a job.

As State Police Sergt. A. M. Spioch reconstructed the accident, the cab was coming from Herald Harbor, and when approaching Crain Highway it struck a car going from Baltimore to Annapolis.

The second car was operated by Laurence L. Merrill, 30, of Annapolis. He had four passengers in his car, none of whom was injured.

The cab came toward him, Merrill said, forcing him off the road. The injured and dead were taken to Annapolis by passing motorists. An inquest into the deaths will be held Saturday by Acting Coroner William H. Discus, of Bendfield.

Charles Stewart died in Providence Hospital of injuries received at Clinton, when struck by an auto driven by Frank Ward, 23, also of Clinton.

Farm Policies Of AAA Hit By 2 Groups

Potato Act Harms Many, Benefits Few, Liberty League Says.

Brookings Institution Assails Livestock and Dairy Control.

Sharp criticism of the Administration farm control program came yesterday from two sources, the Brookings Institution and the American Liberty League.

In two reports, covering the dairying and livestock industries, the Brookings Institution warned of "artificially high price levels which might eventually react adversely to the producers themselves.' Actual price rises in the livestock industry, the institution found, have been chiefly the result of drought.

The Liberty League statement attacked the potato control amendment to the agricultural adjustment act, declaring "the Soviet government could not have devised a more complete system of control of its subjects than is embodied in the potato act."

Asserting that the AAA "has become enmeshed in a network of its own making," the Liberty League pointed out that the number of basic agricultural commodities subject to control has been increased from 7 to 15.

"It will be impossible to stop at this point," the league said. "The congress and enforcement officials must go on and on until every product of agriculture is brought under control. The process can not even stop there but must extend to competitive industrial products.

"The system may break down of its own weight or be wiped out by the courts. Otherwise, it is leading inevitably to methods of restriction of the private lives and business activities of our people wholly foreign to American institutions. Potato control is another step toward socialism.

League Lists Objections.

Discussing the implications of the act, the league said that if the Government can limit or prevent production of potatoes on the farm, it can take complete control of agriculture, mining and other production activities in all the States.

The league listed ten objections to the act and said it believed they made it unconstitutional.

They are:

"1. The act attempts to control production of potatoes through a punitive tax of questionable validity.

"2. It is intended to benefit large commercial growers of potatoes but will harass several million small growers and burden the entire consuming population.

"3. To present excessive costs of many articles of food will be added higher prices for a staple commodity on which the poorer classes are absolutely dependent.

"4. Regimentation of farmers who produce potatoes is compulsory rather than voluntary.

"5. Even a small garden patch

De Seversky Sets New Plane Speed Record

Detroit, Sept. 15 (AP).—Maj. Alexander P. de Seversky, former Russian war ace, drove his 710-horsepower amphibian plane to a new world record at Wayne County Airport this morning. He was clocked at 227.733 miles an hour over the 3-kilometer course.

The officially recognized mark was 191 miles an hour, held by Lieut. E. G. Stone, of the United States Coast Guard.

De Seversky's record was announced from a check of stopwatches. Photographic timing plates are being developed and his official mark will be made known later in the day.

The flight was made under perfect weather conditions, with a slight breeze blowing across the course.

62 Buses Replacing Trolleys Set New Pace to Chevy Chase

Street cars became a thing of the past for commuters of upper Connecticut avenue and Chevy Chase yesterday as 62 motor buses were rolled into service and the trolleys went to the barns.

The shift, made by the Capitol Transit Co. without ceremony, was complete last night and, after a day of the new service, company officials reported only minor changes in the schedules were needed to perfect their new transportation system.

At the same time residents along the new bus routes were hailing the buses as a definite boon. Those who ride the "cars" reported the trip downtown was much faster and smoother than before and those who don't ride said the buses were quieter than trolley cars.

The trolley rails abandoned yesterday as the buses went into service stretched along upper Connecticut avenue from Calvert street to Chevy Chase Circle. At the same time auxiliary car lines on to Chevy Chase Lake, Kensington and Garrett Park were shut off and feed-in buses, connecting with city coaches at Chevy Chase Circle, were put in service.

Trips from these points to the downtown area are being made on two kinds of schedules—local and express. Both will get commuters to their destinations well ahead of the old street car time, company officials said.

Express buses, with Van Ness street as the last boarding point, were making the downtown trip from Chevy Chase Circle to Eighth street and Pennsylvania avenue in 35 minutes yesterday and local buses over the same route were taking only a few minutes longer—some of them negotiating the distance in 38 minutes. The transit company said the street cars were no match for this speed.

Inauguration of the bus schedules turned out to be a benefit to employment as well as to transportation service. The new system requires many more men than did the old. Company officials yesterday were not ready to report the exact number. But the total of the 62 buses on the Chevy Chase route

Hitler Shouts Warning To Jewry, Demanding Respect for Nazi Flag

Der Fuehrer Replies to Flag Insult

Adolf Hitler spoke yesterday at Nurnberg, proclaiming the Swastika as the German national flag, and answering the "insult" to that emblem by a New York magistrate.

Withdraws Citizenship of Non-Aryans in the Reich.

Declares Trouble Brews in Memel

Attacks Lithuania for Its Treatment of Germans.

By the Associated Press.

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 15.—Adolf Hitler's Reichstag, stung by the strictures of a New York magistrate against the Nazi emblem, tonight pronounced the swastika to be the Reich's sole flag, hurled defiance to Jews throughout the world and limited German citizenship to members of the Germanic race.

The specially summoned lawmakers acted after their Fuehrer, in a fiery mood, had opened the Reichstag session with a bitter attack on Lithuanians for their alleged treatment of Germans in the Memel territory, and had called upon the solons to approve three new laws.

Der Fuehrer and his legislators permitted Jews to continue as German subjects, but forbade them to fly any flag save the blue and white Zionist emblem.

Hitler and the Reichstag also forbade inter-marriage between Aryans and non-Aryans and provided for punishment for sexual relations between the two.

Attack on Lithuania.

They also forbade Jews to engage Aryan domestic servants under the age of 45 years.

Hitler charged Lithuania with responsibility for events in Memel which, he said, contained the seeds of trouble. Then he made known his refusal to allow Germany to be drawn into any international controversy in which she is not directly involved.

Expressing his contempt for communism, he voiced his appreciation of the United States Government's regrets for the Bremen-Brodsky incident in New York. But he used it as an example of how Jewry, even in high places, allegedly fights against the Nazi state.

(Magistrate Louis Brodsky, in New York, dismissed five men arrested when the Swastika was ripped from the prow of the German liner Bremen at a Manhattan dock last month, commenting that "in the minds" of the defendants and others the Nazi emblem was a "pirate flag.")

Further Threat.

The Reichsfuehrer threatened in his brief but vivid speech to enact even more stringent laws if today's legislation fails to solve the Jewish problem.

Two of the three laws he decreed dealt with the Jewish question; the third honored the Swastika as the national emblem.

The Reichsfuehrer charged Memel

15 Hurt as Bleachers Collapse At Max Baer's Training Camp

200 Fight Fans Are Plunged Into Tangled Mass of Wreckage While Watching Fighter in Action; He Continues His Workout.

By the Associated Press.

Speculator, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Fifteen persons were injured, two seriously, today when ringside bleachers at Max Baer's training camp collapsed, plunging 300 fight fans into a mass of tangled wreckage.

Most seriously hurt were William Metz, 65, of Salisbury Center, N. Y., shock and a possible fractured shoulder, and Mrs. Donald Burch, 41, of Lake George, N. Y., undetermined internal injuries and severe shock.

Thirteen others suffered minor injuries and were able to leave for their homes with the assistance of friends and relatives.

The collapse of the bleachers came just as Baer began an afternoon workout with sparring partners in preparation for his coming heavyweight fight with Joe Louis, Detroit's "Brown Bomber."

Baer stopped his workout momentarily, but resumed it when it was apparent that camp workers and persons in the crowd who were unhurt were caring for the injured.

About 5,000 persons were at the camp at the time, the largest since Baer began his workouts before public scrutiny, but only about 300 were in the bleachers.

The wooden stands gave way without warning, precipitating the crowd 15 feet into a heap of smashed and jagged boards and a tangled mass of bodies.

Baer boxed eight rounds with four sparring partners to complete his workout.

Pompton Lakes, N. J., Sept. 15 (AP). More than 3,000 persons watched today as Joe Louis unleashed his best fighting fury.

It was the largest crowd in the history of Dr. Joseph Bier's training camp and the "Brown Bomber" sent it away convinced that the saga of his crushing fists is no myth.

Lew Flowers was the first sparring mate. The second round had to be cut short when Flowers began to stagger drunkenly under the Bomber's blows. Paul Cavalier, who followed, made things interesting for a round, but in the second Louis found his target and Cavalier left the ring bleeding from the nose and mouth. He was staggered by a terrific right just as the round ended.

Louis wound up the day by traveling a fast round with Roy Williams.

Bob Moody was next. He had his mouth piece knocked out by a left hook and his headgear ripped by a right cross as he got within range of the tan barrage.

Phone Inquiry Topic as Pecora Sees Roosevelt

President Will Return to Capital, Start West Within Week.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 15.—President Roosevelt conferred again today with Ferdinand Pecora, New York Supreme Court justice, on the possibility of Pecora directing the investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. ordered by the Senate, but a decision again was deferred.

Pecora indicated he intended to stand for renomination and re-election this fall. There is no doubt of Democratic support. Likewise there is no doubt of a keen interest by Pecora in the telephone inquiry about to be started.

Mr. Roosevelt met this afternoon with the vestrymen of the St. James Episcopal Church in which he is a senior warden. Discussion was on dedication of a tablet to the first settlers of Hyde Park next Sunday.

Silent on Europe, Mining.

Apparently watching closely the troubled European situation and the negotiations over wage scale in the mining industry, the President withheld comment on both.

Despite his long day's travel over upper New York State yesterday visiting public works projects, Mr. Roosevelt was up early today and motored to church with Mrs. Roosevelt and his mother.

James Roosevelt, eldest son, and his wife, Betsy, joined the family here last evening. Today James and Betsy were hosts to the office staff of the baking company which he now heads. The group gathered on the family cottage picnic grounds.

2-Game Lead Taken by Cubs

Beat Brooklyn, 6-3; Cards Drop One to Giants as Yanks Halt Tigers.

Chicago's rampaging Cubs, late-season sensation of the major leagues, yesterday accumulated their twelfth straight victory with a 6-3 triumph over Brooklyn and bounded two games in front in the National League pennant race.

While the Cubs were winning, the back-sliding Cardinals were losing to the third-place Giants, 7 to 3. Their defeat left the second-place Cardinals only a game and a half ahead of the Giants.

The National League race will be intensified today when the Giants open a four-game series with the Cubs in Chicago. The Cardinals will be playing Brooklyn.

The New York Yankees, still holding to a faint chance in the American League pennant race, reduced the Tigers' league lead to 3½ games with an 8-7 victory over the Detroit Club.

Flying to Sweetheart, Spanish Aviator Strays

Mexico City, Sept. 15 (AP).—Officials of the National Telegraph System reported late today Juan Ignacio Pombo, Spanish aviator on the last leg of a flight from Spain to see his sweetheart here, had landed at San Marcos, in the State of Guerrero, after wandering more than 125 miles off his course.

Reports received by the officials said Pombo lost his way when thick clouds obscured his route over the mountains. He took off from Vera Cruz at 7:58 a. m. and was seen over Orizaba 30 minutes later. He was expected at Mexico City about 9:30 a. m. The telegraph officials said Pombo was expected to take off shortly from San Marcos for Mexico City.

Between You and Me

G. O. P. Alternative to AAA Backfires; Capper's Paper Blasts It; Realtors Win FHA Battle.

By Raymond Clapper

REPUBLICANS groping for plausible alternative to offer in place of the Democratic AAA have been inclined to favor an export bounty scheme in some form or other.

Former Gov. Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, threw out the suggestion when he addressed the Republican grass roots meeting last June and the farm belt Republicans had been so bewildered that they reached for it eagerly. Later, Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago, when challenged about his complaint against high food prices, fell back on the export bounty idea to show that while he was against AAA he was for some kind of farm relief.

But the suggestion has backfired. And in Kansas, the heart of the country that the Republicans must carry to win next year. The Topeka capital, owned by Senator Capper, a Republican who has never misguessed his State yet, says that the export bounty plan—incorporated in the old export debenture and McNary-Haugen bills in the 1920's—was all right then. In fact, Congress passed the McNary-Haugen bill twice, but Coolidge vetoed it the first time and Hoover the second time.

But that isn't the worst of it, according to Senator Capper's paper. This plan, which two Republican administrations refused to accept when it was passed, is futile now because the export market has gone.

"European nations," the Capital says, "that constitute the world market for wheat—and to a lesser extent for pork—have erected barriers against the importation of wheat and pork from the United States. The question of price is not involved. Embargoes, import quotas, tariffs as high as $1.90 a bushel bar wheat from Europe, except in very small quantities, where quotas prevail.

"So far Col. Knox's utterances see mto indicate lack of understanding of the farm problem. He should brush up on history and economics, as well as politics."

Senator Capper's editorial, of course, was directed not only at Col. Knox but at most Eastern Republicans who haven't yet figured out that they can't carry the farm country simply by calling AAA the brainstorm of fatheads at Washington.

The real etsate brokers have thrown Stewart McDonald, new Federal Housing administrator, for a loss.

On July 3, McDonald issued a statement calling attention to the fact that "no intermediaries, go-tweens or fixers are necessary between commercial banks, building and loan associations and other financial institutions or the Federal Housing Administration, and the individual seeking to refinance a morgage now on his home or to obtain an insured mortgage on a new home."

It was pointed out that although any individual could use such an outside agency if he desired, "more often than not a fee is being asked for a service which FHA and mortgagees approved by the Administration perform as a service to the prospective borrower."

That made the real estate men—whose business had been one of the hardest hit by the depression—wild. The National Association of Real Estate Boards went to work on FHA and finally won a change in the rules designed to offset the impression given by the earlier statement. through it was not forbidden spe- The amended rules permit—cifically before—the prospective borrower to employ a broker in arranging for an insured mortgage loan and to pay the broker such compensation as it satisfactory to the borrower.

The victory for the real estate men came only after a hard fight and sharp differences inside of FHA, where one group insisted that one of the purposes of FHA was to eliminate some of the extra charges in home finincing which have proved a buden to small buyers.

Here's how the Administration will spend a half-million dollars in New York City:

To assign colored housekeepers to Staten Island homes, in which one or both parents are afflicted with illness or other disability, $25,291. Same for Borough of Queens, $121,000.

To organize sewing shops in settlement houses, $300.000.

But they can't seem to get around to the job of eliminating fatal grade crossings.

greatly exceeds the number of street cars formerly in service.

After a day marked by hundreds of inquiries from residents not yet fully acquainted with the new type of service the transit company's schedule department took time to explain it believed "everything was running smoothly."

"Of course you can't expect to make a change ike this and have everyone satisfied the first day. We have to make some adjustments.—But say, when we do, the people are going to be mighty pleased.

Traffic Tieups Ended.

"We did get a few complaints today alrghit. But we are reminding those who don't like the buses that when a street car broke dokn the whole line was held up—now if a bus gets into trouble the other coaches keep running just the same. And that is something."

Everyone, however, was not in a mood to complain. One Connecticut avenue home owner said.

"Well, we certainly glad the old street cars are off the street. One of them made mor nois than a dozen of these new buses."

Removal of the Chevy Chase street cars from service incidentally brought substantial relief to the downtown traffic congestion. The Chevy Chase and Potomac Park trolley lines running through the downtown area nearly blocked other traffic at Fourteenth street and New York avenue in rush hours.

Use H and I Streets.

Downtown buses are routed over Connecticut avenue to Eighteenth street. At I street they swing left, running to Thirteenth street, thence to E street then east to Sixth street.

Uptown bound coaches cross from Thirteenth street to Seventeenth on H street. Like the inbound buses, they follow Connecticut avenue to Chevy Chase Circle.

Suburban buses from Garret Park, Kensington and Chevy Chase Lake will be operated by day on hourly schedules. Inr ush hours they will be run every half hour.

Mr. Roosevelt plans to remain here for another week. About a week from tonight he will return to Washington to make a radio address from the White House inaugurating the annual Mobilization for Human Needs on the night of September 23.

With the White House still under repairs it is expected he probably will start out the next day on his long planned trip to the Pacific Coast.

Mapping Western Tour.

The itinerary still remains to be announced. Marvin H. McIntyre, a secretary, is consulting with Mr. Roosevelt on the itinerary this week.

Pecora left for New York City after a late afternoon talk with the President without making any announcement.

Elliott Roosevelt, of Forth Worth, Tex., second son of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, called during the day to make the family reunion complete.

Jews of World Get a Warning From Germany

Hitler Demands Respect for Nazi Flag, Tightens Curb on Non-Aryans.

has "tortured Germans only because they are members of the German nation and because they wanted to remain Germans."

Of the Brodsky-Bremen incident, he said:

"The insult to the German flag in the United States for which the United States apologized in dignified form shows how far the international Jewish agitation has progressed."

After Hitler had stepped aside, Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, in a 25-minute speech, thus presented the three sets of laws:

(1) Black, white and red, are to be the colors of the Reich and the Nazi Swastika is to be the flag of the Reich and Nation, as well as the flag of commerce. The law leaves to Hitler and to Gen. Werner von Blomberg, defense minister, the decision as to what the war flag will be.

(2) Defining the Reich's citizens and dividing Germans into (A) members of the State whose protection they enjoy, and (B), the Reich's citizens, who alone can be of German or similar blood and who are to be allowed to faithfully serve the Reich and her people. This Reich citizen is to be given a letter which makes him the sole bearer of citizenship privileges.

(3) Entitled "protection of blood and honor," it provides that marriages between Jews and Germans or persons of similar blood be forbidden, and in the case they are contracted abroad, renders them null and void.

Other Regulations.

Extra-matrimonial sexual relations between non-Aryans and Aryans are forbidden under plan of prison punishment.

Jews are forbidden to engage domestic help under 45 years of age, with a year in jail, a fine, or both as the punishment. The law further provides that Jews may not fly the German flag—only the Zionist.

If Aryans and non-Aryans contract marriage they will be sent to the penitentiary.

The 600 deputies cheered and yelled their approval as each of the three laws was presented.

Frequently they raised their hands in the Nazi salute, and there was laughter throughout the chamber at the provision forbidding Jews to hire domestic help under the age of 45.

In a speech that lasted but 12 minutes, the Reichsfuerheh told his specially summoned lawmakers in apparent reference to both the Ethiopian and Memel questions that Germany would take no position on "any question which does not directly affect us," but "we look with interest to Lithuania."

"Memel, which was stolen from Germany and legalized by the League of Nations has for years tortured Germans only because they are members of the German nation and because they wanted to remain Germans," he declared.

"They are treated worse than criminals in other countries just because they are Germans."

Tremendous applause greeted his statement.

... . Foreign Issues. .. ..

The German dictator, opening the Reichstag shortly after 9 p. m., plunged immediately into foreign questions. He said he desired to make a short statement before introducing several laws at the close of the Nazi party convention scheduled to end tomorrow with army day.

Of the memel question he asserted.

"Protests in Kaunas of signatory powers were without results. The German government looked upon all this with deep regret. We hope some day these assurances will not assume forms which might be regretted by the whole world.

"Prepaartions for coming elections constitute a breach of the treaty. Lithuania must be admonished with all possible means to hold to these treaties."

Hitler then went into the subject of Communism and the alleged effects o fthe recent Communist international congress at Moscow.

"We are determined to meet Communism in Germany with more effective measures of national Socialism," he said.

"The insult to the German flag in the United States for which the United States apologized in dignified form, shows how far the international Jewish agitation has progressed."

Raps German Jewry.

Turning to anti-Jewish occurrencies in Germany, Hitler told the leigslators they grew out of the impatience of the German people "because German Jewry, encouraged by interantional propaganda, believed it could stage similar protests in Germany.

"In order to reach an amicable relation between the German people and the Jews the government will try to bring about legal regulations. The law, which will be read by Goering (Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, president of the Reichstag) constitutes only an attempt at legal regulations.

"However, should this not work out we'll have to take it up once again."

With this the Reichsfuehrer turned the meeting over to Goering, saying he would read three decrees.

He said by the first the "German flag will be given due honor and the second will be about Jews." The third he left undefined.

Before his references to Memel Hitler said:

"We do not wish the international press to pull Germany into any of its speculations. Sometimes it is said we will start a war with France, at other times that we are going to attack Austria, then again that we'll start a war with Russia. But I don't know where."

"The German government," he said, "does not see fit to conclude friendship agreements with every country which puts out its hands. However, the German government makes its decisions not against anyone for it can take decisions only which can be brought into consonanee with the conscience of the German people."

Goering, beginning to read out the three new laws, spoke first of the "debt of gratitude which the (Nazi) movement owes to its symbol (the Swastika)."

This was greeted with such a storm of cheering that the rest of his announcement was drowned out.

The Memel territory belonged to Germany before the World War. Under the Versailles Treaty, article 99, the allies administered the territory for three years.

The Lithuanians seized Memel January 15, 1923, bya surprise attack. A convention was signed by the powers in May, 1924, defining the Memel territory as a unit within the sovereignty of Lithuania, with a governor to be appointed by the President of the Lithuanian Republic.

There has been a period of strained relations between Lithuania and Germany for many years, beginning with a strong protest sent by the latter nation to the allies against the Lithuanian seizure of Memel. Strikes have harassed the district, while German and Lithuanian influences clashed.

The coming general elections in Memel September 29 have served to intensify the present bitterness between the two elements.

Last January the two nations accused each other of massing troops along the Memel borders.

Hands Off Ethiopia

Geneva, Sept. 15 (AP).—Reichsfuhrer Hitler will maintain a hands-attitude in the Italo-Ethiopian conflict—that was the first reaction tonight in some internaional circles o Hitler's Uurnberg speech regarded here by political observers generally as moderate.

Relative to the Memel situation, some observers remarked that under the Memel convention, which was arranged by Norman Davis, America's ambassador at large, Germany is still a juridicial member of the League of Nations Council and can draw the Council's attention to any infraction of the convention, which guarantees fair treatment for Germans in the territory.

Under the terms of the convention, Lithuania agreed that any dispute over Memel can be handed to the World Court for definite settlement. If Germany actually leaves the League October 14, when her notice of resignation expires, she will no longer be able to seek redress from the League, the experts pointed out.

Fredericksburg Jurors To Convene Thursday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 15.—A special grand jury on which two colored men will sit, has been summoned by Judge Frederick W. Coleman to convene Thursday to consider indictments against two white men and a Negro. Grand Jurymen are M. L. Latham, Warren Sullinger, E. G. Stone, John F. Gouldman, Joseph Walker and D. M. Kay. The last two are colored.

Corporation Court reopens Thursday after the summer recess. Judge Coleman will review the docket and set a number of cases for trial. Among them will be that of Robert McGhee, of Spotsylvania County, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death several months ago of Frank Mills fatally injured here when an automobile driven by McGhee and another in which Mills was a passenger crashed.

Crop Control Policy of AAA Hit by Groups

Measures Seen Harmful to Many for Benefit of Few Producers.

maintained by a housewife and producing only a few bushels for sale is subject to control.

"6. Regulations which will annoy both producers and consumers include requirements that all potatoes must be packed in closed and stamped containers of special design.

"7. Provision is made for any army of snoopers through severe penalties imposed on persons who fail to tell of violations by their neighbors.

"8. Bootlegging will be unavoidable despite fines up to $1,000 and jail sentences up to one year.

"9. Buyers of bootleg potatoes made equally guilty with sellers.

"10. An expanded bureaucracy, made possible by blanket authority to the Secretary of Agriculture to appoint officials and employees without regard to Civil Service and classification laws, will meddle in the affairs of some 3,000,000 private potato growers."

Only Few to Benefit.

The league declared that act will benefit approximately 30,000 commercial growers and will prove a hardship to 3,000,000 other growers and will add to the living costs of the entire population of the country.

The price of potatoes on August 27, the league pointed out, was 1.7 cents per pound. It predicted that the price will increase to 2.5 cents or even 3.3 cents "depending upon how much pyramiding occurs in the process of distribution."

The rookings study on live stock control, prepared by D. A. Fitzgerald, formerly of Iowa State College, pointed out that financial benefits to producers have come, or will come, "from the pockets of taxpayers in general, including the producers themselves."

The dairying report, prepared by Dr. John D. Black, professor of economics at Harvard University, said that scarcely one important milk market is operating satisfactorily under its license. Dr. Black concluded that problems of the industry could be met without resort to positive production control devices such as are provided for the AAA act.

The Brookings Institution found that the income of hog producers was approximately 4 per cent more than it would have been if no reduction activities had been undertaken.

"In addition," the report said, "producers, as corn growers, receive dbenefits from processing taxes and other Federal sources, so that the total money income received by corn-hog producers under the AAA program is estimated at about 7 per cent more than would have been received without it. Again, the effects of the drought overshadowed those of the AAA."

Drought Aided Loan Plan.

Successful working out of the corn loan plan was ascribed to the effects of the drought in raising prices, inasmuch as the loan rate "from 20 to 80 per cent higher than would have been justified by ordinary standards, had been set up to satisfy producers and quiet farm unrest."

The investigator found that if weather conditions had been normal in 1934, only a part of the loans would probably have been repaid.

In discussing the meaning of the amendments passed recently by Congress, the report finds that the increasing emphasis placed on the parity price formula "contains the most disturbing implication."

"Farmers at the present time do not generally feel that parity prices for hogs are desirable, but the continued emphasis on such prices and all the publicity of the AAA may in time make farmers feel that they are entitled under all the conditions to parity prices for their livestock," the report said.

"Solely from their own point of view, producers should hesitate greatly before supporting a program calling for reduction in supply large enough to cause any and very large shift in consumers' demand for pork. For a short period of time a large reduction may not have any permanent ill-effects; but over a long period it seems probable that the gross value of the hog crop would decline."

Dr. Stevenson to Preach.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 15.—Dr. Joseph A. tSevenson, of Philadelphia, director general of the department of social education of the Presbyterian Churches in America, will deliver a sermon in the Presbyterian Church here next Sunday, it was announced today by the Rev. J. Marshall Rutherford. Dr. Stevenson will remain here for a meeting of all churches of the Carlisle Presbytery on the following day.

League Faces Greatest Test In War Crisis

Rule on Sanctions Against Italy to Confront the Council This Week.

by the British navy to bottle up Italy by blockade in the Mediterranean and pressure by international forces against Italy's Alpine border. Whether additional international forces would be sent to aid Ethiopia is uncertain.

Week-end events recalled the forecasts of last week that Friday might be the Italian dictator's choice as "day of Fascist destiny" and the day might witness three important events:

1. Test mobilization of 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 Fascist men, women and children in all parts of the Fascist domain.

2. Italian troops' first crossing of the Ethiopian frontier.

3. "Complete breakdown of the Geneva farce"—the quotation is from the Italian official who made the triple forecast.

Choice of Friday would be in keeping with Premier Mussolini's love of dramatization, for it marks hte "day of national unity," September 20, 1870.

In view of the gravity of impending decisions, leading League members decided tentatively today to hold the Council in session until Christmas, with possibly a brief recess in mid-October, when the Council would move to Paris to allow movement of the League secretariat from the old to the new building. This reflects the general expectation of war.

Many delegates motored to the country or played tennis over the Sabbath, but the representatives of Britain, France, Spain, Poland and Turkey labored day-long over the wording of their proposals.

Their chief concern was understood to be so to word the 12-point statement that Italy's rejection would throw clearly upon the Fascist state the onus for any international disaster which might result.

generally supposed to be the signal fo rthe beginning of hostilities.

Today's newspapers were full of Ethiopian mobilization plans and told of hte concentration of Ethiopian troops on the Eritrean and Somaliland frontiers.

Sanctions "Fading."

At the same time Italian correspondents at Geneva gave their readers to understand there is a possibility that sanctions will be definitely avoided.

Il Messagero says:

"The world 'sanctions' begins to pass out of fashion at Geneva and perhaps only a few days will go by before we won't hear it spoken anymore."

The Fascist party secretary, Achilles Starage, began today a nation-wide convocation of Fascist federal secretaries, divided into three groups, the first of which was summoned to meet at Bari. The meetings are designed to prepare for a vast one-day fascist mobilization to be held soon.

While preparing in East Africa, Italy also is making ready on the mainland against any emergency. Further indicafion of the extent of this preparation was given by the announcement that the provincial administration in Rome had made plans for the construction of anti-aircraft refuges in the basements of buildings now under construction.

What Is Inflation? In This Country Its One of Credit; Set-up Here, How Will It Be Used?

By Samuel Crowther

ADVANCING the opinion that we are in the early stages of an inflationary movement at once brings up the question: "What is inflation?"

A period of rising prices is not necessarily one of inflation, nor is a period of declining prices necessarily one of deflation. Prices have to be expressed in money, but changes in them are by no means always caused by changes in the value of money. Let us call inflation financial elephantiasis. It destroys legitimate business by forcing some prices violently upward and all prices out of line, and encourages a wild speculation that eventually finishes everyone.

In this country, the amount of hand money in circulation has not, since the Civil War, had anything to do with prices. Today nearly $1,000,000,000 more money is in circulation than during the boom days of 1929—and prices are lower. The increase in circulation is due largely to the abandoning of bank accounts. If incomes are better, many will reopen bank accounts and we may see a shrinkage in the money in circulation.

Our people have the banking habit and for that reason currency inflation of the German and Austrian sort—which is the only kind most people visualize—is, in this country, nearly impossible. We are all set for inflation, but it will be a credit inflation. The amount of currency circulating will be an incident to inflation and not a cause.

• • • •

NO overt act of the Government—such as printing or borrowing money to pay the bonus or to pay off farm mortgages—will change the character or increase the speed of inflation. The volume of money that might be printed under any measure as yet proposed could not, unless we change our habits, bring about a currency inflation, for the money as soon as spent would find its way back into the banks. Indeed, two-thirds of those who received bundles of the crisp new money would at once open bank accounts. Printing three or four billions of fiat money might cause such a fright as to paralyze business and even force prices down for the time being. An adventure into currency inflation might prove deflationary. Fiat issues would not so much inflate the currency as they would further inflate the already inflated mass of bank deposits and bank reserves.

The money of this country, as everyone knows—but as also almost everyone seems to forget when talking of inflation—is not the bank note but the bank check. The bank deposits at any moment constitute our visible supply of circulating medium, but our actual supply is the total amount of credit which the banks can grant. When a bank lends, it simply credits the borrower's account with the amount of the loan. Therefore every bank loan shows up as a deposit, except in the rare case where the borrower checks out his deposit and puts it in a sock.

The amount that the banks can lend is determined, not by their capitalization, but by the amount of their reserves. The reserves of banks in the Federal Reserve System are fixed by law but now may be varied by the Federal Reserve Board. The reserves of nonmember banks are fixed by the laws of the States in which they operate. For the period 1925-31, out of total average bank deposits of $51,856,000,000, the amount of $35,425,000,000 was in Federal Reserve banks.

• • • •

GOVERNMENT borrowing, as the money is spent, increases bank deposits. For two years practically all the increase in deposits has come from this source. That is one fund for lending. The other fund is to be found in the reserves. These have been vastly increased by gold imports attracted by the Treasury's idiotic gold buying policy. On September 4, member bank reserves were more than $2,500,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

If bank credit were now to be expanded on the same average ratio to gold as obtained during the 1923-31 period—that is, at the rate of 11.6 to 1—bank deposits would go to around $100,000,000,000—provided currency did not materially increase. The high point of total bank deposits was in 1930 when they reached $54,954,000,000. Thus we have full facilities for the wildest sort of inflation—an inflation which the Federal Reserve Board will not recognize until after its puny powers to control have become wholly impotent.

Only one thing needful is lacking. The banks must lend—or go broke through dearth of earnings. But there are few borrowers. And only borrowers can get the credit orgy started.

The present business of the country does not require any more money than is being used, but, if speculative opportunities arise, then a way will be found to borrow to finance the speculation. That will promote inflation in some as yet undisclosed sector of our economic system. The price rise will be pointed to with pride as the advent of prosperity. In due time, the inflation will spread and become epidemic.

The set-up for inflation is here. Exactly how that set-up will be used is not yet clear. But the stirrings of speculation are everywhere. Market operators are brimming with optimism. Customers' men are anxious to buy lunches.

Large Orders Boost Steel Output to 54%

"Steel" Reports Awards of 61,686 Tons of Material During Week.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, Sept. 15.—In a week also made noteworthy by a 2-point rise in the steelmaking rate, allocation of 23 naval vessels requiring over 35,000 tons of steel, award of 26,686 tons of structural material, and lifting of the final barrier to the Government's steel-consuming $400,000,000 program of highway construction and grade crossing elimination, the increasingly strong situation in pig iron is significant, states the magazine Steel.

This does more than connote a broadening of the base of the already-encouraging iron and steel market. Consumers not only are covering for their present substantial melt but they also are accumulating inventories against still heavier requirements and probable price advances. Ingot production practically equaled the 1935 high of 54½ per cent, established in the first half of February, when it rose 2 points to 54 per cent last week.

In New England, incidentally, more Dutch and Russian iron is coming in. At Chicago, furnaces have built up the largest backlog in several years. One explanation of the increased melt of iron is the brisk demand for sanitary ware, which almost approaches boom proportions and affords a clew to the building situation.

$20 a Ton.

A Southern maker of bessemer iron has upped its price $1 a ton to $20, Birmingham, and is refusing longer to meet Northern competition. Carnegie Steel Co. is assigning one Edgar Thomson stack to merchant iron and converting another to ferromanganese.

This spirited pig iron market works back to iron ore, the Great Lakes movement to September 1 being 11 per cent ahead of last year. It also has the backing of scrap. The slightly easier price situation at Chicago a week ago has traveled east to Detroit, but elsewhere prices are strong. Bids for railroad material at Pittsburgh portend a still higher level. The Japanese and West Coast market for scrap is soft, but the Eastern export trade—perhaps mirroring the European situation—is firm.

Through the market for bars, alloys and flat-rolled steel runs a distinct strain of automobile business. Nevertheless, the role of the railroads, building, shipbuilding and miscellaneous outlets acquired greater importance.

40,000-Ton Order.

Norfolk & Western came out for 40,000 tons of rails—15,000 for immediate rolling and the rest for 1936. Chesapeake & Ohio seemed nearer action on its inquiry for 30,000 tons. The Pennsylvania may have a car and locomotive program if loadings improve. Russia has placed 7,000 steel car axles with the Carnegie company. New York Central ordered 6,500 tons of rails and accompanying fastenings.

Outstanding shape award was 8,460 tons for American Sheet & Tin Plate Co. expansion in the Chicago district, going to the American Bridge Co. New England captured the lion's share of the naval program, its requirements for plates, shapes and bars for vessels awarded its yards approximating 22,000 tons. Steel sheet orders are not so heavy as in August, but shipments reflect the rolling of last month's bookings, chiefly for the automotive industry. The latter is a heavier buyer of wire products.

The effort of mills to achieve a more remunerative level by bringing prices more into conformity with costs may lead to the spread of quantity extras to other products than carbon cars. In the latter schedule, a slight adjustment is favorable to buyers of 5 to 10-ton lots. Revised discounts on bolts and nuts lower the price fractionally to some classes of users. Generally, prices have been extended for the fourth quarter without formal announcement. The scrap influence lifts Steel's iron and steel composite 2 cents to $32.81, and, of course, puts the scrap index up 21 cents to $12.62. The finished steel composite, meanwhile, is steady at $53.70.

Lumber Gains To High Point Of This Year

Shipments for the Week Totaled 1 Per Cent Above Output.

Lumber shipments during the week ended August 31, 1935, made another advance to the highest reported point of the year, with the exception of two weeks in April. Production and new business were about the same as during the previous week; revised figures will raise production somewhat above that record, probably bringing the total to the highest point of the year.

Shipments were 1 per cent above output, new business was 6 per cent below production. All items were materially in excess of the same week of last year. These comparisons are based upon reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of leading hardwood and softwood mills.

During the week ended August 31, 601 mills produced 228,326,000 feet; shipped 230,056,000 feet; booked orders of 214,860,000 feet. Revised figures for the preceding week were mills, 63,; production, 227,771,000 feet; shipments, 223,333,000 feet; orders, 219,281,000 feet.

West Coast was the only region to report orders above production during the week ended August 31. Total softwood orders were 5 per cent below production; hardwood orders, 23 per cent below hardwood output. All regions but Southern cypress, Northern pine and Southern hardwoods reported orders, all but Northern pine reported shipments and all regions reported production, above similar items of corresponding week of 1934. Softwood orders were 44 per cent above and hardwood order 1 per cent below those of similar week of 1934.

Identical softwood mills reported unfilled orders on August 31 as the equivalent of 30 days' average production and stocks of 138 days, compared with 24 days and 163 days a year ago.

Forest products carloadings totaled 31,368 vcars during the week ended August 31, 1935. This was 612 cars more than in the preceding week; 9,550 cars above similar week of 1934 and 5,464 cars above the same week of 1933.

Cotton Mart Quiet After Crop Report

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 14.—The chief event affecting the cotton futures market this week was the Government crop estimate.

While the report, placing the indicated yield at 11,489,000 bales, was nearly 500,000 bales under average expectations, the market response was comparatively moderate.

The effect was undoubtedly minimized by "fear of the crop movement," and after selling up from 10.32 to 10.62 for December contracts, prices reacted partially with fluctuations later in the week, rather narrow and irregular.

General business was restricted by the increased movement of cotton to market in the South.

The primary cloth market remained comparatively quiet, but prices held steady following the recent activity.

Smart Women To Dress Hair With Jewels

Ornaments Back in Vogue; Shops Are Featuring Innovations.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE RETURN to elegance which marks this year's styles is nowhere more strongly evidenced than in the tremendous vogue of hair ornaments. Flowers, both natural and artificial, tiaras, bandeaus, rhinestone clips and even leaves and fruit are going to be worn by smart women everywhere this season.

The owner of one of Washington's best known beauty salons has recently returned from Europe with a trunkful of these pretties. Here are some of the entrancing novelties which will make you the belle of the ball.

"Water drops," little rhinestone drops which are fastened into the hair by means of a tiny tortoise-shell comb. The comb is concealed by the hair, and only the drops are visible. These, scattered here and there, or placed in a row or cluster, sparkle and glitter with an engaging twinkle. They look like diamonds, and cost only $1 apiece.

Bandeaus, made of silver and gold cloth, very regal and elegant. One particularly, made of white velvet bound round and round with tiny seed pearls, looks as though it had once graced the locks of a Medici princess.

"Queen Tatania" is what we dubbed the stunning, fairy-like tiaras on sale at this shop. One made of bakelite interspersed with glittering rhinestones, has tiny prongs at the front tipped with lustrous pearls. The only thing needed to complete the fairy-like illusion is a wand.

Some stunning arrangements of fruits, flowers, and leaves in silver and gold are also most attractive. Made of gilded leather, they spell the ultimate in daintiness and chic.

New Orange Sticks.

THE OTHER DAY we made an exciting discovery in a local store. It is nothing less than a new inventionin orange sticks, made of a material called crystallite. This material is guaranteed not to crack, break, or fray, as so many of the wooden ones are apt to do. Very flexible, it will pry the dirt away from them ost obscure nook. It is very easy to clean, too,and costs only 25 cents. For 10 cents more, you can get one with a little brush attached to the end, ideal for whisking away the dirt.

Lipsticks Create Furore.

A STUNNING lipstick for evening is being featured this month by a downtown department store. It comes in all shades, from deep crimson to burnt orange. The case is particularly attractive. White enamel, it is encircled with a band of glittering rhinestones in ruby red. The price is $1.50. These lipsticks have created a furore in Paris, where they are being carried by smart women everywhere. They are far more in harmony with the glitter and glamour of evening apparel and accessories than are the everyday lipsticks.

Makes Perfect Gift.

A PERFECT GIFT or bridge prize is the perfume and sachet kit on sale at the same store. It contains three bottles—one of eau-de-cologne, one of a delightfully scented perfume, and the third of sachet. It comes in a handsome satin-lined box, with an artificial flower attached, and costs only $1.

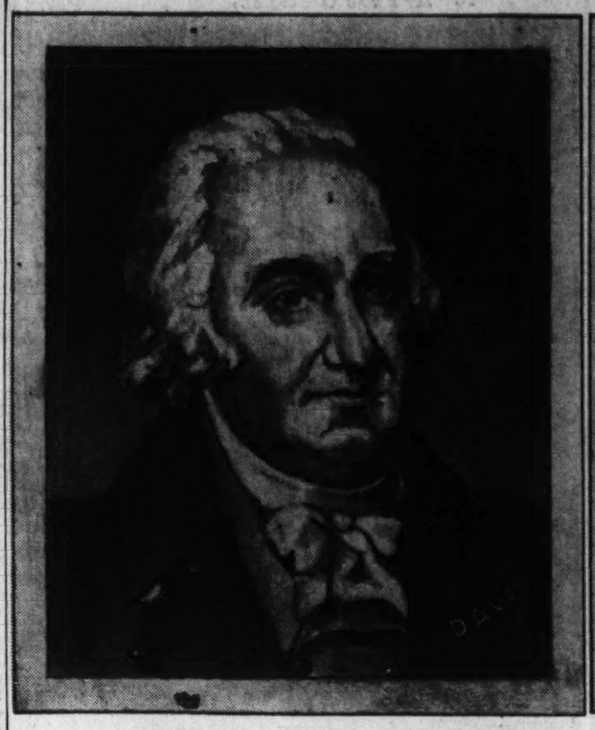
Eau-de-Cologne Featured.

Users of eau-de-cologne will be interested in a grand new bottle gotten out by one of our leading perfumers. Not only does this product have all the refreshing and cooling qualities of ordinary eau-de-cologne, but it is delicately perfumed as well, so that it can be used instead of scent. It comes in a good-looking bottle of cut glass, topped with a smart black stopper and is an ornament to any dressing table. Costs $1.25.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

John Eager Howard—Peggy Chew



Peggy Chew, Colonial belle, mourned for nine years her first sweetheart, Maj. John Andre, dashing British officer who was executed as a spy. Later, she fell in love with John Eager Howard, Revolutionary War hero. Their wedding was a society event of early-day Philadelphia.

Romance Grows Despite Hapless Love for Enemy Spy.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

A ROMANCE that grew out of a hapless love for a man who sacrificed his life serving as a spy for an enemy country is the unusual story of pretty Pegg Chew, one of the loveliest of the galaxy of colonial belles.

Maj. John Andre, dashing British officer, a man of good family and education who lay down his life for his king, was the first sweetheart of Peggy Chew.

Peggy Chew was the granddaughter of Dr. Samuel Chew, a militant Quaker who found liberty in the New World and whose Maryland county seat, "Harrington," was a mansion of colonial renown. His son, Benjamin Chew, became Chief Justice of Pennsylvania and among his bevy of children was a daughter, Margaret or "Peggy."

Margaret Chew, born in 1759, was one of four pretty sisters. In 1778 when Sir William Howe's men were occupying Philadelphia a Mischianza was planned, a great fete at which both colonials and the British in the city took part.

It was natural that Peggy and her sisters should shine on the program for the fete and her knight was John Andre, a dashing major on Gen. Howe's staff, who, although he was opposed to the policies of the rebellious colonies, was thoroughly convinced as to the beauty and grace of their fair daughters.

British Are Guests.

In the truce that prevailed in the Quaker City at the time the British officers were welcome guests in the homes of the city. Therefore, when the managers of the Mischianza were casting about for knights to ride in their tournaments their eyes lighted on Maj Andre, who promptly acquiesced and selected Peggy Chew as his lady fair. His was the privilege of designing not only the tickets, but also the costumes as well for the fete. The major, then a captain, tossed off some neat topical verses as well.

One of his poems he addressed to Peggy. It read:

"The Hebrews write and those who can
Believe an apple tempted man
To touch the tree exempt;
Tho' tasted at a vast expense,
'Twas too delicious to be sure,
Not mortally to tempt,

"But had the tree of knowledge bloomed,
Its branches by much fruit perfumed,
As her enchants my view—
What mortal Adam's taste could blame,
Who would not die to eat the same,
When gods might wish a Chew."

The manuscript on which this poem was written in long hand by Maj. Andre has been described as follows: "Faded and yellow with age, the little parchment vividly calls up the gallant young English officer, eager and full of keen interest, throwing himself with youthful ardor, with light-hearted seriousness, into this bit of superb frivolity. On the cover he has outlined a wreath of leaves around the initials 'P. C.' and he has made a water color sketch to show the design and colors of his costume as a knight of the 'Blended Rose' and that of his brother, Lieut. William Lewis Andre, who acted as his esquire and bore his shield, with its quaint motto, 'No rival.' The device, 'Two game cocks fighting,' must have been too difficult to draw, for he uses in his picture that of Capt. Watson—a heart and a wreath of laurel, 'love and glory.'"

Sentimental Glamour.

But the way for Maj. John Andre was not to be "love and glory." Instead his destiny pointed to an end as a war spy, captured in the very act of conveying news to the enemy of the American forces. Pretty Peggy Chew must have shed tears at Andre's fate and she mourned him for nine long years, her romance with the British officer casting a sentimental interest around her in the eyes of the belles and the beaux of the time.

Once she wrote to a friend: "What is life, in short, but one continued scene of pain and pleasure varied and chequered with black spots like the chess-board, only to set the fairer ones in a purer light?"

But youth can not mourn forever and after a time Peggy was out in the gay whirl of Philadelphia society and her romance with Maj. Andre must have seemed to have been but a dream. Suitors by the score besought her hand and Peggy would have none of them. Yet Cupid had one final arrqw in his quiver for her which would bring her to the lasting romance of her life.

In Baltimore was a young Revolutionary hero, of splendid family, John Eager Howard, who had distinguished himself at the Battle of Cowpens. He was a friend of George Washington and heart and fancy free until the day in 1786 when he first met Peggy Chew.

Perhaps he, too, had heard of the unfortunate love affair with Maj. Andre and that made him more anxious to meet the charming Miss Chew. They met and Col. Howard gave up all his ideas of bachelorhood forthwith.

The General's Diary.

After a time Peggy was persuaded to forget Maj. Andre and in her new love the tragic fate of her first sweetheart began to fade out of her mind. On May 23, 1787, Gen. George Washington, in Philadelphia for the Federal convention, set down in his diary very late that night. "Dined at Mr. Chew's. With the wedding guests there (Peggy Chew having married Col. Howard, of Baltimore). Drank tea with a very large circle of ladies."

Peggy had consented at last and Philadelphia society attended the nuptials en masse.

The honeymoon over, the Howards returned to Maryland, of which Col. Howard later was to be Governor. Later he became United States Senator from that State. Peggy and he remained happy in their children.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

I'M ALL IN FAVOR of humoring friends, relations and the men of the family. After all a lady with a house has her say about most points decorative, and it's only fair to defer occasionally. And it could always be worse—I have a friend whose husband has an enormous stuffed moose over her mantel piece. Nevertheless we do understand this reader's dilemma.

E. W. M. WRITES: I've just been married with bridesmaids and a veil and all the trimmings . . . that means several white elephant gifts that we must use because they come from near and dear relations. One is an Oriental rug with much too much red for my taste. It's room size and too dominant for a bedroom . . . it could be used in the living room, but I have my heart set on some other colors entirely there. That means it ought to go in the dining room. There is also a greenish arm chair which I think is pretty awful but I must use . . . could I possibly put both of them in the dining room, then use some other nice colors with them . . . And, oh yes, what in the world can I do with a picture of horses—there's a mantel in the dining room where it could go . . . my husband adores it and I haven't the heart to discard it.

ANSWER: I think your dining room can be salvaged even if you use the things you dislike in it. First about the horses . . . they might not be had at all over the mantel if you have a nice frame. Something in plain, light-colored waxed wood might be interesting. Then have the walls painted white and the glass curtains of white with plain green chintz draperies a lighter shade than the chair. Have the chair seats all in this lighter green chintz. Use either a round glass bowl or a silver centerpiece for the table between meals and keep it filled with white flowers.

Severe Illness Often Results From Bee Sting

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

BEE stings affect people differently. In many cases the sting of a common honey bee is as severe in its general effects as a crushing injury involving the fracture of an important bone and the tearing of muscles. Many victims describe the earliest symptoms as similar to those of shock; that is, the pulse is weak and feeble, the blood pressure falls rapidly and the face and extremities become blanched and cold.

We now know that bee venom is not only a local irritant, but is has a powerful effect on the body as a whole; in other words, it acts as a virulent poison, and the symptoms resemble those of snake bite. There are pain and swelling in the part injured, followed by a diffuse perspiration, dizziness, headache, nausea, and a feeling of contraction in the throat. Sometimes convulsions and unconsciousness ensue. After two or three days the symptoms subside, but weakness usually persists for many days thereafter.

There are each year a score or more of deaths from bee stings in the United States and the explanation is either shock to the nervous system or the rapid absorption of venom that acts quickly upon the heart and the breathing mechanism of the body. It is, of course, entirely possible that the sting of the insect may penetrate a tiny capillary and the poison be injected directly into the circulation.

No case of bee sting should be regarded with indifference. An immediate effort should be made to remove the sting, not by means of forceps or finger nails, but by lifting or scraping out the barb with the blade of a knife. Any attempt to grasp the sting between the fingers and thus remove it will squeeze more poison into the wound. The best type of local application is ammonia. A bit of gauze or a handkerchief soaked in the solution may be placed over the injured area. Soft soap is also of value, while hot applications are useful in relieving pain. If symptoms of collapse are present they must be combated promptly. A physician should be summoned, who may inject adrenalin hypodermically. Should he be delayed or not available the patient must be kept warm and given strong coffee to drink. A teaspoonful of aromatic ammonia diluted with warm water is helpful.

Well Balanced Meal at Small Cost Suggested

Spaghetti Dinner Can Be Purchased Complete in Grocery Store.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE WOMAN who stays at home and makes her entire job that of running a house has more time to plan her meals than the woman who works in an office and also maintains a house or small apartment.

Breakfast is comparatively a simple meal to plan and prepare, and the working woman finds it necessary to have luncheon near her office, so it is dinner that is often a problem. She wants a menu that is attractive and well balanced as well as easily prepared. Steaks and chops are the easiest meats to cook and serve, but right now when the price of meat is so high most of us are looking for other dishes that are less expensive and as quickly prepared.

Your grocer has numerous suggestions in packaged products that you will find economical as well as attractive. Canned meat and vegetable stews, corned beef hash, canned salmon and tuna fish, chop suey, and spaghetti dinners that include sauce and grated cheese are just a few of the items reclining upon your grocer's shelves.

Today's dinner menu features the above mentioned spaghetti dinner which you can buy complete in your grocery store. The spaghetti must be cooked in boiling salted water, and the sauce heated. A small amount of ground beef can be purchased and rolled into tiny meat balls if preferred, but the spaghetti with a smothering of hot sauce and a sprinkling of grated cheese plus salad, dessert and beverage will make a satisfying meal.

Dahlias Potential Source of Sugar

The dahlia may replace the sugar cane in sweetening the country's food and drink, if researches now being conducted by Prof. LeRoy S. Weatherby and Dr. Wray M. Riger, of the University of Southern California, are successful.

There is sugar in the tubers of the dahlia, as chemists have long known, but the difficulty is to get it out economically, and scientists are trying to solve this problem.

Chemists call fruit sugar levulose. Since there are hundreds of fruits, dahlias are but one of many sources of levulose. Their potential importance in sigar making can be gathered from the fact that ten tons of dahlia tubers can be grown to the acre, a yield equal to that of sugar beets, and that dahlia sugar is nearly twice as sweet as cane or beet sugar.

Woman Denied Early Educational Advantages Now Works in Office With College Graduates and Feels Self-Conscious and Nervous; Asks Help.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Have always thought it rather foolish to write to someone I did not know, but after reading your column and the sound advice you give, thought I would ask for advice or suggestions. Story as follows:

Motherless after birth; raised by elderly relative who loved me dearly and was very strict and kept me with her all the time, thus spoiling childhood and contact with other children . . . by the time I was 18 I struck out for myself, as I had been turning all my salary into the home. I then went to night school for a while and finally switched to business college, as a result of which I was able to obtain a good position and was able to do and get some of the things I had always longed for.

• • • •

Obtained more poise and made a few friends. Then I married (am still happily so) and gave up position to keep house. Depression came and hit us with many others and I went back to work but had to start 'way back as I had left the town of my birth. I now work with girls who are all college graduates and feel my lack of education in many ways. They know I went through business college and take it for granted I graduated from high school. Of course they converse on all subjects and I usually listen and say nothing. It has made me very self-conscious (something I thought I had outgrown) . . . I am very nervous, too. . . .

• • • •

Can you suggest some books I should read or some study I could pursue in the evening that would not interfere with my work (which requires my full attention)? I tried going to night school and taking the high school course but had to give it up as it took all my time and I felt tired and nervous. When in a crowd I always try to be friendly and sociable but make a bigger hit with older persons. . . . Is this a problem and can you solve it? . . .

BEWILDERED.

Don't Deal in Symbols.

DEAR BEWILDERED: Your problem, such as it is, is mostly a figment of your imagination. As Shakespeare wisely said in "Hamlet." "There is nothing either good or bad but thinking makes it so." Instead of supposing your business associates are necessarily your cultural and intellectual superiors because they are college graduates, why not reason that if you can hold your own professionally with college graduates you must be their mental equal at least? As a matter of fact, one might logically deduce in such an instance as this that the person denied academic advantages is the natural superior. One might say, "This is water seeking its own level," and the reason that you now find yourself on a professional level with college graduates, despite your lack of formal education, your natural cultural and intellectual level must be high indeed.

• • • •

Now, one assumes you have a good mind. But if you don't converse with ease on a wide range of interesting subjects, that is your own fault, yet one which should be remediable without recourse to night school study of high school courses. Education is not concluded, is scarcely even begun, with a high school diploma or a college sheepskin. Webster defines education as the "acquisition of knowledge, skill or development of character, as by study or discipline;" and as "the sum of qualities acquired through individual instruction and social training." High school and college courses are placed at the disposal of the individual primarily as a means of introducing him to the various avenues of approach to greater knowledge of himself and the world in which he lives. They are society's shortest cut to the first principles of culture. But the short cut is never the only road to any destination.

• • • •

The most charming, liberal and enlightened minds often belong to persons who pursue their "acquisition of knowledge, skill or development of character" along paths which are never routed through the upper classrooms. An outstanding representative of this type of mind was the late Dr. Walter Williams, president of the University of Missouri. Dr. Williams never studied in a college classroom, yet he founded the first university school of journalism in the world (at Columbia, Mo.) and became a college president and an educator known 'round the world.

• • • •

The solution to your problem is comparatively simple, I should say. Concern yourself with realities and not with symbols. Read for pleasure and profit, and not for show. At your age, surely you know better than I what fields of knowledge intrigue you most. These are the fields to invade, not the immature intricacies of high school study. When you read more widely, you may be less impressed by the comments your colleagues have to offer "on all subjects," and more ready to thrust in your own conversational oar.

• • • •

One of the best bits of reading I know for the person of limited time and energies who wishes to keep informed, is a little magazine called "Readers' Digest," published monthly and to be found on every newsstand. The range of topics is universal, culled from many sources, and should give you an idea of the wealth of places, people and things there are in the world to get excited about.

• • • •

Acquisition of knowledge has its roots in curiosity. If you can get mentally exicted about any one subject, and will begin to satisfy your curiosity on that subject by a course of reading, however random, you will be amazed to discover how your mental horizon expands, and how your fund of conversational topics increases.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

CHARGES of radical activities against John L. Donovan, NRA, which were scheduled for a hearing before the executive council of the American Federation of Government Employes following the federation's convention in Cincinnati, have been shelved temporarily, it was announced at AFGE headquarters here.

It was said nothing could be done in the case at Cincinnati because all data had been left in Washington. Formal aspects of AFGE's efforts to subdue the "extreme liberal" wing led by Donovan, Jessica Buck, NRA; Henry Rhine, NRA, and Edna Richter, FERA, are likely to be dropped. Quiet pressure within the organization seems to be the keynote of tactics in the immediate future, and that means, according to same AFGE members, concessions.

Donovan himself viewed the special committee's threats lightly, making amusing references to the case on the floor of the convention—and then leaving the city the night before the case was to have been heard.

However, it is all probably the quiet period before the storm. It is reported the case will be presented before the Central Labor Union of Washington, and, more vitally, before the American Federation of Labor when its executive council meets at the convention in October at Atlantic City.

Hirst Millhollen, (P), Fine Arts Division, Library of Congress, has just published two fine new prints in his series of etchings on Georgetown. One, "Washington Headquarters," has been acquired by the library for its exhibition collection. The other, "Back Porches," is an interesting informal sketch.

TO HELP Government employes become better acquainted with the problems they handle in Federal offices, the School of Public Affairs of American University, in its so-called "In Service" training program, has expanded the curriculum to several courses. Most of the courses will be given either by Government officials, or in co-operation with them.

Explaining this program, Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, American University chancellor, and Arthur S. Fleming, director of the School of Public Affairs, said experts from each field had been called upon as instructors.

Three courses will be given under supervision of Dr. Emery E. Olson, new professor of Public Administration, as follows: Public personnel management, technique of supervision and administrative problems common to all Government departments. The first two are being given jointly by American U. and the Graduate School, Agriculture.

Ismar Baruch, chief, Division of Personnel Classification, Civil Service Commission, will offer a course in "Development Installation and Administration of Classification and Compensation Plans."

Another course in Administrative Statistics of the Federal Government—their collection and use in the formulation of policies, will be offered. Ernest M. Fisher, director Division of Economics and Satistics, will conduct a seminar in Housing and Home Financing.

N. F. F. E. Activities.

Activities of the National Federation of Federal Employes will be intensified here this week following the return to the city of delegates to the recent national convention at Yellowstone National Park. Two important meetings here in the next few days undoubtedly will plan co-operation in the organization's announced educational program to safeguard the merit system. All local unions are awaiting reports from their delegates who attended the five-day conclave.

The schedule of meetings:

Today—Executive Council, D. C. Federation of Federal Employe Unions.

Tomorrow—General Accounting Office Branch, Local No. 2, and Civil Service Commission branch of the same union. The latter meeting is scheduled at the commission at noon.

Wednesday—D. C. Federation of Federal Employe Unions.

Thursday—Commerce Department Branch, Local No. 2.

Friday, Board of Representatives, Local No. 2.

Unless otherwise designated, all meetings are to convene at 8 p. m., at the N. F. F. E. local auditorium, 710 Fourteenth street northwest.

Finance Division, Resettlement Administration, has elected John P. Dunnigan (F) president of its bowling league. Other officers are R. W. Huge, vice president, and J. N. Culbertson on Bridge

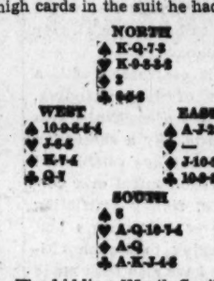
Gratz Scott's Stories.

THE death of Gratz M. Scott in New York has removed from the list of bridge leaders a name which was prominent in the venerable game of whist and in its successors, auction and contract bridge. One of the most popular of the expert players and teachers, Gratz was one of the few real gentlemen that we can boast of in the bridge profession. He came originally from St. Louis, a city that gave to bridge many well-known names, including Bryant McCampbell, whom I always have considered the greatest auction player of all and from whose genius I have learned so much. He made the St. Louis Racquet Club famous in the annals of bridge. Not only was Gratz a genial host, but he had a supply of amusing stories about bridge experiences which seemed nearly inexhaustible.

It is possible that Gratz Scott's untimely death was hastened by the following harrowing experience: He was playing for pretty high stakes with a millionaire as a partner who fancied himself rather hot as a bridge player, but who actually was a beginner. Holding spades A-K-Q-2, hearts A-K-Q, diamonds A-K-Q, clubs A-K-Q, the self-styled expert found himself playing a grand slam in spades. The dummy held four spades to the jack. A club was opened, and the beginner first took his three high clubs. Then he led out his top hearts, then his top diamonds. Now, having nothing left but the four high trumps, he proudly led them out, starting with the ace. By a miracle, every player had three cards of each suit, and no one could trump his hearts, diamonds, or clubs, so he won every trick. Meanwhile, poor Gratz was suffering tortures of hell every time a card was led. Swelling with pride, the millionaire turned to Gratz: "Well, that was perfect, eh, Gratz?" "Perfect, you miserable fish!" Gratz exclaimed, on the verge of collapse. "You had 13 cards to play and not one of them did you play correctly."

Two Chances for One.

One of the qualities which made Gratz Scott a great player was his refusal to take anything for granted. In the deal below he was successful only because he did not assume that an opponent necessarily held the high cards in the suit he had held.



The bidding [North-South vulnerable]:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1 Ht.	Pass	1 Sp.	1 Di.
3 Di.	Pass	4 Ht.	Pass
4 N. T.	Pass	5 Ht.	Pass
6 Ci.	Pass	6 Ht. [final bid]

West opened with 5 of hearts.

West, not knowing his partner could win the first trick in spades, opened the 5 of trumps. Gratz Scott was South. After drawing trumps he could see a sure losing spade trick. He must avoid losing a club. This seemed easy, for East had bid diamonds and it was likely that he held the king. South could finesse for the diamond king and discard one of dummy's clubs on the diamond ace. Before trying this, however, he decided to give himself an extra chance. If the club queen were doubleton, he would not have to risk the diamond finesse. He led out the ace and king of clubs. The queen dropped, and South later trumped the diamond queen and made six hearts. The diamond finesse would have lost.

Today's Question.

Question—What is an honor-trick?

Answer—Defensive honor-tricks are cards which will win tricks, the first or second time the suit is led. For example, an ace always is one honor-trick; K-Q-x is one honor-trick; A-K, two honor-tricks. But Q-J-10, although it will win after the ace and king are played, must be counted only one-half honor-trick, for it will not win a trick until the third round of the suit.

"Camels don't get your Wind"

FAMOUS GOLFERS SAY

CRAIG WOOD (right)—Tommy Armour—Helen Hicks—Gene Sarazen—Bill Mehlhorn—Denny Shute—Willie Macfarlane!

Their names sound a roll call of tense moments that have made golfing history, when prime "condition" and healthy nerves were at a premium. All are outspoken in their preference for Camels.

"Camels are so smooth and mild they never affect my wind," says Craig Wood, pictured at the right as he paused to smoke a Camel. Willie Macfarlane adds: "Camels are mild. They don't get my wind." Miss Helen Hicks brings up the feminine viewpoint. "There's a delicacy of flavor in Camels that appeals to women. Camels never interfere with one's wind." And Denny Shute says: "I switched to Camels years ago. I smoke them constantly, without upsetting my nerves or disturbing my wind."

You'll Like Their Mildness Too!

Such experiences with Camels can be matched right among your own friends. You'll like Camels too. Camels are made from costlier tobaccos. They never tire your taste.

SARAZEN. "It's a very important point to me as a steady smoker that Camels are milder," reports Gene. "They never get my wind or upset my nerves."

ARMOUR. "I've smoked Camels for years," Tommy says. "Camels never bother my nerves or my wind—convincing evidence that they are mild."

MEHLHORN. Bill comments: "I smoke Camels steadily. From years of experience, I know that they won't get my wind or jangle my nerves."

Fruits Of Indiscretion.

The State Department seldom finds it necessary to apologize to a foreign government for an insult from an American court. Private citizens sometimes indiscreetly give offense to other governments. But a higher rule of conduct, not to mention sense of duty, is expected of the courts. If Secretary Hull's statement to the German government concerning Magistrate Brodsky's opinion in the Bremen riot case contained nothing more than an expression of regret, therefore, it would be a humiliating experience for the New York judge.

Actually, however, this statement is more than an apology to the German government. It is also an emphatic rebuke to Magistrate Brodsky. Of course, the State Department has no direct control over New York's judicial system. Nevertheless, the effect of its accusation that this magistrate went out of his way to voice irrelevant and illegitimate criticism of a foreign government is to challenge his fitness to serve on the bench.

Most unfortunate of all is the effect which this incident is having upon the Nazi fanatics in Germany. It is being used as an excuse to press their persecutions with still greater fury. In contemplating his indiscretion Magistrate Brodsky can not evade the facts that it has embarrassed the Government to which he owes allegiance, that it has immeasurably weakened his own position and redounded to the detriment of the cause which he apparently wished to serve.

Hamlin Garland At 75.

Birthdays are more than milestones: they are recapitulations. They offer a convenient time to ask, "What has this man done for the world?"

Hamlin Garland, who is 75 today, has done much to merit the literary fame that is his. He represents a period in American literature from which most of the figures have disappeared—Clemens, Howells, Whitman, Burroughs. Garland knew them all. For 45 years now he has been writing. He has known what he wanted to do and has done it.

In the process, moreover, he has made a threefold contribution to our literature: (1) short stories that are classic for their realistic portrayal of the Middle West homesteading days; (2) his Middle Border series, the history of two pioneer families—the Garlands and the McClintocks; (3) his recent literary logbooks, rich in anecdotes and reminiscences of his many friends and "companions of the trail." His contribution is essentially a historical one: a vivid and lasting record of pioneer America.

Garland now lives in self-termed "exile" in California. We wish him many more years of well-earned rest. It should gratify him to feel that his "Son" and "Daughter" of the Middle Border will be read as long as there is interest in one of the most inspiring chapters of our national story.

To Remove Uncertainty.

The obvious determination to force an early test of the constitutionality of major regulatory laws passed at the last session of Congress is admirable. The long delay in securing a decision from the Supreme Court as to the validity of the gold-clause legislation, the recovery act and lesser measures was due to a large extent to the dilatory tactics of an Administration patently reluctant to risk interference with its legislative program. Moreover, in the first flush of enthusiasm for the New Deal, the public at large was markedly indifferent to the constitutional issues raised by the regulatory experiments of the Federal Government.

Today, however, a spirit of healthy criticism and skepticism is again found. People are aware of the social and economic disorders likely to result from giving effect to far-reaching regulatory laws, and then suddenly declaring them unconstitutional. The fate of NRA is fresh in mind. Industries that had to submit to its rule are in some cases jubilant, in others regretful because of its passing. But all of them have been subjected to a prolonged experimentation which has affected their present prospects and future development. A Supreme Court decision could not undo what had already been irrevocably done.

Fortunately the industries affected by measures of the past session are preparing for a speedy "show-down" to test their constitutionality before huge bureaucratic organizations have become firmly entrenched in office, taxes collected under laws that may be overthrown, and readjustments ordered that may later be disavowed.

Whether one approves or disapproves of the form taken by the utility legislation, he should welcome the decision of the Edison Electric Institute to discover without delay whether the law in question is constitutional. All laws calling for radical and permanent changes in the relationships between private industry and regulatory authorities are a cause of trouble so long as uncertainty as to their constitutionality exists. Once that uncertainty is removed, it becomes possible to plan for the future, and thus realize the benefits of regulation while avoiding the evils that result from provisional conformity with the laws.

Constitution Day.

Plans for observance of Constitution Day tomorrow are arousing more interest than any similar occasion in recent years. For the fundamental law is again a national issue. Recent Supreme Court decisions have stimulated fears in some circles that the Constitution stands athwart the road to progress. Resulting suggestions that its terms or the manner of its interpretation be changed have provoked apprehension, equally sincere, lest this keystone of American democracy be weakened or destroyed.

Public-spirited citizens have done well to take advantage of this revived interest, thus stimulating appreciation of the part the Constitution has played in the evolution of political institutions. The local committee, under the able chairmanship of Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, has arranged a varied program which promises to reflect the spirit of the Constitution as well as to emphasize its historic significance. In Boston a series of important addresses on present-day constitutional problems will be broadcast from Faneuil Hall. The pageantry and oratory thus set in motion will doubtless reverberate throughout the Nation.

It is all too easy for a people to forget, in an age of rapid transitions, the basic principles on which their civilization has been built. No one would be foolish enough to contend that our system of government is perfect. But when all the vicissitudes of nationhood are considered, along with the chaos existing in some other lands, the wisdom behind the document which has guided our political course stands out with striking clearness. In some instances the existence of a written constitution has probably retarded the achievement of worthy objectives. Outworn provisions have been frequently amended, however, while the stabilizing influence of the Constitution as a whole has been preserved.

The very fact that the United States has grown from a weak federation of thirteen States into a powerful nation under the provisions of this basic law indicates that it is not a strait-jacket. Its original conception was broad, and its provisions for amendment are such that no modification can be blocked if it has the support of an overwhelming majority of the people. In these circumstances the protests against restraints from a "dead hand" are as unreasonable as the sacrosanct contention that no changes in the Constitution should be made.

The Constitution may be viewed as an effective consolidation of our political heritage, as will be suggested by a float depicting the Magna Charta in tomorrow night's parade. The importance of preserving all the human rights and advantages gained over such a long period could not be more emphatically illustrated than by an analysis of the dictatorships which today hold millions of people in servile obedience to autocratic power. It would be a tragedy indeed if, in this period of sweeping adjustments, impatient demands for revolutionary changes should be permitted to interrupt orderly progress toward social betterment.

On Teaching Communism.

Corporation Counsel Prettyman's opinion on the teaching of communism in the District schools may well serve as a guide for educational authorities throughout the country. The logic of his conclusions is not only clear but also inescapable. By accepting this opinion as a sort of classic on the subject and disseminating it among school boards and officials of every State, the United States Office of Education will contribute in no small measure to a more intelligent attitude toward scholastic instruction concerning subversive doctrines.

Interpreting a clause in the District appropriations act, forbidding payment of salaries to any instructor in the local schools "teaching or advocating communism," Mr. Prettyman points out that the meaning of "communism" is no longer confined to that sharing of goods which was the practice of early Christianity or the endeavor of the Brook Farm community. Indeed, the word is now popularly applied solely to a political and economic theory "opposed to the established American system." Its disciples are frankly proselytizers, and it would be absurd for a government to hire school teachers who "advocated" the overthrow of that government.

A sharp line is drawn between instruction and advocacy. Mr. Prettyman interprets the law to mean that facts concerning communism may be presented and explained. But children of immature minds should not be urged by propagandists to accept communistic beliefs. As Mr. Prettyman says:

> No cause can be well served by an attempt to suppress factual data. The danger to be apprehended breeds in ignorance and not in knowledge. The mere failure of public school teachers to mention communism would not prevent their pupils from knowing that such a school of thought exists. This was not the purpose of Congress. That purpose, as I have said, was to protect the American system of government from an insidious internal attack through the Government-supported public school system. Advocacy and not information is the objective of the statutory mandate.

In conformity with this ruling "the mere recitation or study of factual data" concerning communism will not be forbidden in the District schools. "Any shadow of favor or support of communism," however, will be ruled out. Mr. Prettyman has applied common sense to a problem that many legislatures as well as school boards have found difficult.

Italy's Economic Weakness.

In rejecting any compromise designed to avert war with Ethiopia, Premier Mussolini declared that Italy now is "able to answer any threat from whatever direction it may come." Italy must present a bold and confident front to the world if she is determined to embark upon a war of aggression and risk the imposition of a League of Nations blockade, which would deprive that country of access to foreign markets. Moreover, these boastful claims of self-sufficiency are intended to bolster up the morale of the people. But they will not deceive anyone who appreciates the extent of Italian dependence upon foreign supplies.

Even in peace times most of the coal, oil, cotton, wool, iron and steel, copper, lead and zinc consumed by Italy has to be imported. For rubber and a number of other commodities indispensable in war times, reliance has to be placed entirely upon imports. Consequently, any concerted action to blockade Italian ports or to withhold the credits necessary to finance purchases abroad would cut off resources essential to the conduct of a war, in addition to inflicting great hardships upon the civilian population.

Although a short and decisive conflict might enable Italy to complete the conquest of Ethiopia before a shortage of supplies became too severe, its economic cost would leave a legacy of debt to burden an already weakened domestic economy.

In any case, Italy is confronted with a serious problem—one of long standing, moreover—because of lack of exchange with which to pay for imports. By a succession of decrees the government has established comprehensive and drastic control over foreign trade transactions, rigidly restricting imports and taking over investments and foreign balances belonging to Italian citizens. Strenuous efforts have also been made to correct the overvaluation of the lira by decrees ordering reductions in wages, interest rates, rents and prices.

In spite of these emergency measures, it has been increasingly difficult to find means of offsetting the normally unfavorable merchandise trade balance. Large amounts of gold have been shipped abroad and last July the government suspended provisions for maintaining a 40 per cent gold reserve behind note issues. The currency is now quoted at a considerable discount from its gold parity, and if it were not for official control would doubtless be much more heavily depreciated. Italy's currency and exchange troubles have been aggravated, of course, by the war threat, since foreign firms are becoming more and more reluctant to extend commercial credits to Italian buyers. Hence, apart from possible official embargoes upon economic and financial dealings with Italy, her government is confronted by serious financial obstacles to the effective prosecution of war.

Furthermore, Italy has been suffering for some time from domestic economic disorders, reflected in unbalanced budgets and rapidly mounting indebtedness. There, as elsewhere, efforts to reduce unemployment have led to an extension of public works and subsidizing of private industry. Recent estimates indicate that the national debt rose from about 100,000,000,000 lire in 1922 to 150,000,000,000 lire in 1934. With a war in progress this debt would grow by leaps and bounds or else currency inflation would ensue.

In short, Italy is threatened with economic disaster on both the home and the foreign front if she persists in her intention to make war on Ethiopia.

A New Lochinvar?

By this time, every one is quite accustomed to Hollywood's magnetism for record-breakers. Whether it be channel swimmers, champion crooners or prize papas, such as Mr. Dionne, sooner or later the movies beckon. But when Howard Hughes set a new speed record for land planes last week, he also reversed the direction of the Hollywood trek. First he made good in the movie metropolis and then launched a still more spectacular attempt to command the world's attention. He succeeded in this to the extent of pushing some 39 miles beyond France's record, and anybody who wants to top that will have to fly over 353 m. p. h. Gradually, on the tennis courts and in the air, America is getting back her championship records.

When Howard Hughes left his Texas home years ago with the avowed intent of producing motion pictures, he was regarded as just another young man who had too much money and not enough stability. While laboring under the stigma of "playboy," he produced "Hell's Angels," one of the finest aviation pictures ever filmed. Having attained the respect of producers and the admiration of the public in that undertaking, he is now restless for achievement in new fields. He intends in the near future to try to beat Capt. Roscoe Turner's transcontinental time. And that feat, even outside of Hollywood, may rightly be termed "colossal."

Air conditioning has much to recommend it, but its field necessarily is limited. It has been tried for years on the doughnut with only mediocre success.

It is not known now, of course, who will run for the Presidency in 1936, but it's a safe bet that Lincoln and Jefferson will be dragged into the race.

Letters To The Editor.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Cool To Communism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of September 1 concerning communistic activities at Howard University so aroused my curiosity that, as an alumnus of that institution, I took it upon myself to quiz several graduates and undergraduates as to their impressions of the economic conference held there in June.

I found a totality of agreement among them that communism was the "bunk" as far as colored Americans are concerned. The scholarly addresses of Dr. DuBois, and Dean Kelley Miller at that conference made the futility of communism stand out in relief in its absurdity and impracticability, as a social panacea for colored Americans.

The verbal tirade against President Roosevelt, Dr. DuBois and Dean Miller drew no response of approval from the audience as the editor of the Masses attempted to demonstrate the merits of communism. While listening to his bombastic chatter I recalled an expression of Robert G. Ingersoll's: "Slander is the barrack behind which ignorance hides when it cannot refute argument." The Federal Government need have no fear of the influence of communistic propaganda at Howard.

The mass of colored Americans are and always will be 100 per cent Americans. Let it further be known that they are not being deceived by the mask liberalism extended to them as a bait by the Communist Party. Colored Americans can recall too well how this deceptive technique was used by the unscrupulous carpet-baggers on the gullibility of his unschooled forefathers during the reconstruction period.

Today the American Negro is utilizing his intelligence and good will in the task of breaking down the hostile social attitudes born of the fear and confusion of that period. With the gradual stabilization of American industry the few professed Negro Communists will soon be singing, "Happy days are here again, communism stay away from my door."

"Radio" Accidents.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have often wondered how many automobiles involved in present-day accidents are equipped with radio, and whether the playing radio was directly or indirectly responsible for the accident.

In my opinion, another matter that deserves immediate attention is the law regarding killings by automobile. Under the charge of manslaughter it is almost impossible to secure a conviction. Therefore, the law should be changed to make this a misdemeanor, then undoubtedly convictions could be secured without difficulty in most cases. Speed that keeps one from having the car under complete control at all times, depending upon existing conditions, is either directly responsible or the most important factor in the greatest majority of accidents.

Long's Critics Are Challenged.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: I was amazed, as were many of your readers, that you would publish such an article as that which appeared in your issue of September 11, captioned "Fair Enough," by one of your feature writers, Westbrook Pegler.

Your editorial on the preceding page was of a softer tone, yet I don't believe it necessary for you to go back 65 years to find what you might consider a parallel case.

You will find men who have gained prominence in industry and finance as well as in politics have been as ruthless as "Fair Enough" depicted the late Senator Long.

Pegler states that "Louisiana was not yet ready for a blood purge," yet at the same breath would have us believe the assassination of Senator Long was "Fair Enough."

Ah, Westbrook Pegler, where are your gentlemanly qualities you found so lacking in Huey Pierce Long?

How much courage does it require to challenge a fallen foe?

READER.
Washington, September 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to comment on the cowardly manner in which your brilliant columnist, Mr. Westbrook Pegler, has attacked the character and achievements of the late Senator Huey P. Long, at a time when millions of Americans are mourning his death.

I feel there are countless others who will join me in these opinions, irrespective of their political beliefs. To my mind these comments made in your paper on September 12 and 13 of this year are most untimely, and in the words of this great satirist himself, "can hardly be said to have had patriotic or altruistic motives." W. R. DAWSON.
Washington, Sept. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am greatly disappointed in the attitude taken by The Post in regard to Huey Long. After the man has died and is not able to talk back, you begin printing all his faults, as though you were afraid to do so while he was alive and when he could speak for himself. This is not an honorable way of dealing with any person. Why the sudden criticism?

My personal opinion of Huey Long is that he was a sincere, hard-working man, an idealist who was not afraid of risking his life for what he thought was right and just. Such a man is a rare gem in this sea of life where too many empty shells are found. The pity of it all is that the way he died strikes a blow at any optimism we may entertain in regard to civilized man.

How little has man himself progressed from his cave-dweller ancestors! His passions are as fierce as ever. ANONYMOUS.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please accept my congratulations upon your recent editorial on Huey Long. You said all that can be honestly said. The supplementary remarks by Westbrook Pegler are very necessary. People should not forget that Huey was a man of violence and came to a violent end.

Mr. Pegler furnishes an additional attraction to your steadily improving paper. A. H. T.
Washington, Sept. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: They can assassinate Senator Long, but they cannot kill the ideals for which he fought. The people of Louisiana should be proud they had such a representative. May his memory remain ever fresh and green. "FAITHFUL."

Mysteries Of The Beard.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What reader of The Post can tell us the mysteries of the beard?

Why are some races bearded, and others almost beardless? Why can some men grow heavy mustaches and chin beards, but hardly any hair on the cheeks? Also how account for different dispositions of hair on men's faces? Why can some men grow beards 5 feet long and others beards only 2 inches long? Why do mustaches and beards usually turn gray before the hair does (like old dogs' muzzles)?

Why does a man twirl his mustache or fondle his beard? Why are the colors of the hair and the beard different? Why are many heavily bearded men bald, and many men with thick hair scantily bearded? Why does a bearded man seldom or never lose his beard through baldness?

Finally, why is a beard? (Reply with intelligence, not with cheap humor.) CHARLES HOOPER.

The Man For The Job.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have before me your paper of September 10 with the interesting article "D. C. Seeks Model Plan to Aid Depression Idle."

For a number of years I have known John A. Marshall, the District superintendent of insurance, and I honestly believe his sympathetic and understanding spirit, backed by his ability, plus his lengthy and varied insurance experience, better qualifies Jack Marshall for this task than any other figure in the public eye today, and that the result of his thought and labor on the subject will be a plan the 48 States can profitably copy.

Congratulations to the District of Columbia in having such a capable man at the insurance helm at this important time.

Man's Own Fault.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondent, C. Alonzo Skidmore, asks how there can be a Divine Creator when man, allegedly the work of His hands, is a creature that has made such a mess of himself and his modern civilization? The answer of Christian theology—at least of the theology of the Eastern Orthodox Church—is sufficiently simple and sufficiently convincing: Neither did God create our present civilization nor did He, in the ethical sense, create modern man.

God created the human race and gave them the inestimable gift of free will, the almost divine power to shape their own collective destiny. And mankind has abused that gift and that power. Man has, indeed, made a mess of his privileges. He has sown the wind; consequently, he is now reaping the whirlwind. BASIL NIKOLSKI.

Whose Breathing Spell?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Roosevelt, with the usual sympathetic concern which he shows for business, says that it now will have a "breathing spell." For once he is right—except as to the time and the breather.

The time will be January, 1937, and Mr. Roosevelt himself will have the breathing spell—a permanent one. Business, to be sure, will breathe easier, but it will be more like a sigh of relief.

The Post Impressionist

Murder On The Riviera.

Post Office, Monday.

THERE are times, we confess, when we wish The Post were what some people call a sensational newspaper—almost, anyhow. Not, we mean, an American sensational newspaper or a British—but a French one.

Those times occur when we read a French sensational newspaper's account of some crime which many another journal would either ignore as sordid, or our of which, with worse taste, would weave a ballad that the sentimental Victorians would have condemned as maudlin.

Our immediate scene is that international playground, the Riviera. Our immediate case in point is the killing there of her 39-year-old son by a 59-year-old mother.

The conservative French press has let the Rozowicki case alone. The middle-of-the-roadsters have "played it down." The sensational French press has——

No, not wept over either son or mother. No, not pilloried the latter as a monster or painted the former as a pathetic victim. Neither have any psychoanalysts been retained by managing editors nor has a single sob sister been sent from Paris to Nice.

The story has been written objectively—with the realization that, in such treament of a story lay mastery. And the result is far more moving than all the shrieks of any siren, whether that engine be a lady or an ocean liner's whistle. The result is Greek, it is Russian of old Russia. It belongs to the Attic tradition and the tradition of Dostoievski.

Here are the simple facts.

The mother was a Pole. The son developed persecution mania. A year before his father's death in 1917, the father had him committed to an asylum for the insane.

The widow, left in straitened circumstances by her husband, proved a tender mother. She visited her son religiously; upon little luxuries for him she poured out the last sou of self-denial—during 14 years.

He loved music, was something of a pianist; she bought him a piano to which he devoted himself.

In 1934, the doctors thought this depressed him. They took away the instrument. When next his mother visited him, he threatened to kill himself unless it was restored. Her appeals for this restoration proving in vain, she, in the November of '34, resolved to house him in her own tiny flat. She had him freed in her care.

"Care" was the word for it. His mania increased. It was directed against her. Over and over, day and day out, he said it—he lived to one purpose only:

"All my misery is due to you. You brought me into this world. I shall punish you. At the first chance, I shall kill you for having given birth to me."

Why didn't she have him recommitted to the asylum? The asylum had become a cruelty. Why didn't she hire a keeper? She no longer had the money to hire one. The poor, nevertheless, help one another. Why didn't she get volunteer watchers from among the neighbors to give her a modicum of rest? She was too proud.

* * *

You can see what a Dostoievski would have done with that situation: The mother's first horror—how she quieted it and her son—how he returned to his threat, and how sharp fear became abiding terror as the sharp threat became abiding determination—the good hours which grew fewer, the violent hours which became more violent, which multiplied—the days when, in their narrow apartment, mother and son watched each other like mouse and cat, the sleepless nights when he waited—when she knew that every sound might prove a prelude to sudden death.

* * *

"If I kill you, nobody will do anything to me, for I have been certified insane."

. . . Through December until February; through February until March—until the 14th of March last.

Did the mother also go mad? Physicians subsequently produced by the prosecution thought not. But, by design or without it, she has never spoken clearly of what happened that morning. He does not appear to have attacked her then. The only thing established is this: she shot him.

Within 24 hours he died. His last words were of hate for her because she had borne him.

"I thought I had long ago measured all human misery," the lawyer told the jurors the other day; "but I have never know anything so pitiable as this woman who killed the sole object of her love." Certainly it would seem that, when she was acquitted, she was as miserable in her liberty as ever she had been in the dock, as miserable as ever she had been in that little flat where she was both jailer and prisoner—with her son. . . .

* * *

Just as we promised to give them, there are the bare facts. And, just as we said before, you can see for yourself what Dostoievski would do with them. Almost what he would do, the French sensational press did. Do you now perceive the true inwardness of our introductory paragraph?

Fair Enough

By

Westbrook Pegler

IT is probable that in a very short time Huey Long's share-the-wealth movement and his Louisiana political machine will be completely separated. They might even come into conflict, because the sock-the-rich campaign developed a large national following of earnest believers and wishers, whereas the machine is a practical, predatory organization of politicians, doing business under discipline, for revenue only.

Under Huey's personal management the two were very comfortable together. The sock-the-rich idea was the front. The enrolled members, scattered over many States, refused to believe that Huey's machine was a political gang. But Huey was a genius who could be a great altruist with a heart that bled for the downtrodden when he was roaring over the air and a Boss Tweed or a Boies Penrose in politics. In his orations he never discussed his machine or his dictatorship, hammering away, instead, on a proposal to take away the Rockefellers' money and the fortunes of the Vanderbilts, Astors and Barbara Huttons and distribute it evenly among the poor by some formula yet to be developed.

• • • •

IT is even possible that Huey at times did feel some genuine sympathy for the poor. If so, however, he never translated his sympathy into reason in a State where his power was absolute. He went to his grave without enacting a single law to mitigate the wretchedness of a class of serfs who believed in him. All his legislation was political, even those laws which had the appearance of reform measures being designed to confirm his dictatorship.

He enlarged the physical properties of the university, for example, a process which offered rich graft but debauched the school when he censored the varsity paper and expelled seven students with the approval of the university's president because they criticized Huey Long. Louisiana University might better have remained in a log cabin.

The sock-the-rich department has been taken over by a clergyman, the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, of Baton Rouge, who had become national chaplain, so to speak. Ministers of the Gospel are not necessarily altruistic, and the motives of this one are subject to a reasonable doubt in view of the fact that he lived in Baton Rouge and must have seen the workings of Huey's gang under the sock-the-rich banner. On the other hand, he may be a sincere man, and in that case would be bound to break away from the political machine now that the management of that department has been assumed by Seymour Weiss, of New Orleans.

But in either case, unless Mr. Smith is an undiscovered genius himself, the sock-the-rich campaign is bound to lose spirit. It is a movement which calls for frequent stimulating orations of the kind which Huey Long could carry on hours at a stretch.

Mr. Weiss is the manager of the Roosevelt Hotel in New Orleans which was named for Theodore Roosevelt, not Franklin D. He runs a good hotel and is a vice president of the National Hotel Men's Association. He was once a shoe salesman and started in the hotel business as manager of the barber shop, like so many other prominent hotel men who began as room clerks, bus boys or bell hops.

• • • •

THE Roosevelt was Huey's political headquarters in New Orleans, and Mr. Weiss is the political treasurer of the organization. He has never had any foolish sentiment about sharing the wealth. He is an office holder by Huey Long's appointment, and if Huey ever took political advice from anybody Seymour Weiss was the man. Mr. Weiss is hard, practical and a shrewd, cynical fighter.

When Gen. Ansell was in New Orleans conducting the government's investigation of campaign contributions and disbursements Mr. Weiss looked him dead in the eye and said that as treasurer for Huey Long he never kept any books. He merely went to "friends of our movement" for donations, and the friends, with boundless confidence in his wisdom and honesty, never asked for receipts or demanded any accounting.

In Huey's drive against the night life of New Orleans he closed a suburban night club which was doing a tremendous business, and the night club in Mr. Weiss' hotel became the principal night life resort of the city. It still is, and up to the time of Huey's death other operators, after due consideration, decided it would not be worth the risk to start night clubs in opposition to Mr. Weiss' room.

• • • •

CERTAINLY Mr. Weiss is a better political boss than Oscar Allen, the Governor, who now will probably go to the United States Senate. The Governor is a flabby man who could not have occupied the humiliating position that was his under Huey if he had any qualifications for leadership. So, although the Governor may remain in public life, Mr. Weiss will be the boss, giving Mr. Allen his orders.

Now the advisability of repealing the dictatorial laws will suggest itself to both sides. Because if Huey's machine should lose out his followers would not wish to leave on the books for vengeful application by their successors the laws which they used to persecute their opposition.

Whatever the future of the sock-the-rich program, the machine under Seymour Weiss is bound to become a separate department, with little sympathy for a preacher's show. Share-the-wealth was just some nonsense which Mr. Weiss, as a practical, old-time boss, will have no use for.

Connecticut Guide

By

William Lyon Phelps

ALTHOUGH I am head over ears in love with my native State, Connecticut, it would not be fitting for me often to sound its praises; but as this year of grace 1935 happens to be the 300th anniversary of the State, I should like to call attention to a book just published called "The Connecticut Guide."

This is a veritable Baedeker; for during the summer and also during the incomparable New England autumn, there are innumerable motorists who visit Connecticut; some who stay here for their vacation, others who pass through its narrow boundaries on their way to the Green Mountains or the White Mountains or the Berkshire Mountains or to Maine or to Canada.

This book for all such happy pilgrims, and indeed for all who live in Connecticut or who have ever been there or who some day will go there, gives in accurate and attractive form the necessary detailed information covering every part of the State. This Connecticut Guide, compiled by the scholarly and brilliant historian, Edgar L. Heermance, of New Haven, has for its secondary title "What to See and Where to Find It."

It contains a felicitous greeting from the Governor, Wilbur L. Cross, who was formerly professor of English literature at Yale. He says with both grace and truth:

"Here is a green and pleasant land, with fields and rugged hills, with forests where the dogwood and mountain laurel bloom, with rivers and lakes and rushing streams that still keep in their names the echoes of the long Indian past, with miles of fine beaches and friendly harbors along beautiful shores, with elm-shaded villages and modern cities and with highways linking them to the quiet countryside."

Hell-Bent For Election

Roosevelt Vain, Says Warburg In Attack On His Sincerity.

James P. Warburg, formerly one of the economic advisers of President Roosevelt, who appointed him financial adviser to the American delegation to the World Economic Conference in 1933, has written an appraisal of the New Deal, the ninth chapter of which appears today. Mr. Warburg has long been a personal friend of Mr. Roosevelt. He has given his appraisal the general title, "Hell-Bent for Election." These articles do not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of The Post. They are presented as an authoritative and penetrating analysis.

IX.

By James P. Warburg.

WE come now to the last of our four yardsticks:

"Granted the importance under the American system of government of the individuality of the Chief Executive, what do we think, in the light of our experience so far, of Mr. Roosevelt's individuality?"

This is by far the most difficult of the four questions, because we find ourselves here almost entirely in the realm of opinion. The first question was easy to answer, because Mr. Roosevelt's preelection promises and postelection actions are a matter of public record. The second question, while requiring a certain amount of analysis of Mr. Roosevelt's purposes, was also relatively easy, because all we had to do was to let Mr. Roosevelt's deeds define his purpose, and his words condemn it. The third question, which we have just answered, involved opinion to a certain extent, but I think the reader will agree that the facts alone present a pretty clear answer.

But, in discussing the individuality of a man—which is by rights the job of a trained psychologist—one is compelled to reach conclusions which are influenced by one's own interpretation of what evidence is available.

I shall, therefore, confine myself in this chapter to the bare statement of the only hypothesis which seems to me to fit the facts.

I have heard many people question Mr. Roosevelt's sincerity and I have heard many people question his intelligence.

The hypothesis which I wish to state is that Mr. Roosevelt is neither insincere nor unintelligent, but that his mind—and consequently his words and actions—is dominated by his emotional desires, likes and dislikes to an unusual extent, and that this domination of the mind by the emotions is what causes his inconsistencies and accounts for all the extraordinary contradictions which we have noted in preceding chapters.

I believe that Mr. Roosevelt's primary desire is a desire to be agreeable, that is, to be liked and admired by whomsoever he happens to be with at the moment.

I believe that Mr. Roosevelt wanted to become President and wants to remain President primarily because being President expresses, more than anything else could express it, the fact of being liked and admired by the greatest possible number of people.

• • • •

IF one accepts this hypothesis, it explains both the words and the actions which have caused his sincerity and intelligence to be questioned; it explains the extraordinary instability of Mr. Roosevelt's basic ideas—as illustrated by his pre-elecion promises and his post-election actions; it explains how he can agree with one man that the wind is from the East and with another that it is from the West; it explains how he can adopt the Socialist platform and deny its label.

You may say that the distinction I am drawing is a fine one, and so it is, but it is nevertheless to my mind an important distinction.

When a man agrees that the wind is from the east knowing that it is from the west, I would call such a man insincere, but when a man agrees that the wind is from the east because at the moment he is honestly convinced that it is from the east, I would not call him insincere, even though I might recognize that his apparent conviction was not an intellectual conviction but an emotional domination of his mind arising from the desire to agree with another man.

I am not saying that this is an admirable characteristic. I am merely saying that it is different from what I would call insincerity.

Similarly, if one accepts this hypothesis, it explains the lack of intelligence and superficiality of which Mr. Roosevelt is frequently accused.

From my own observation I should say that Mr. Roosevelt's mind is quick, his memory excellent and that he has an extraordinary capacity to grasp new material.

On the other hand, this excellent intellectual machinery has often seemed to me to be impeded by very strong emotional interference—by the interference, in other words, of conscious and subconscious desires, likes and dislikes.

Mr. Roosevelt's mind is quick to the point of nimbleness when he is interested or pleased. It is slow to the point of being stationary when he is not.

When he is pleased he is animated, and those who have caused or are sharing his pleasure conclude—quite naturally—that he is "intelligent."

When he is displeased he is slow, stubborn, and those who have provoked his displeasure or who disagree with him conclude—equally naturally—that he is not intelligent.

But this, to me, does not mean that he is not an intelligent person; it means that he is a person whose very excellent intellectual equipment would entitle him to be called intelligent were it not for the fact that he refuses to be intelligent thing that runs counter to his emotionsl desires.

Again, you may say that this is a subtle distinction; and again I would reply that to my mind it is an important one.

• • • •

FINALLY, the same reasoning applies to Mr. Roosevelt's alleged superficiality. I am perfectly certain that his mind is capable of delving deeply into a subject. I have seen him delve into subjects in which he was interested. Ask him something about ships and see if you find him "superficial." Or ask him something about party politics.

On the other hand, he is undeniably and shockingly superficial about anything that relates to economics, and particularly about anything that relates to finance. This is not, I think, because he is incapable of grasping these subjects, but because he does not like them and therefore refuses to make any great effort to understand them.

Nor is all this, to my way of thinking, very extraordinary. We are all like that in greater or less degree. The extraordinary part about Mr. Roosevelt is the extent to which the whole pattern of his living and thinking is woven around his emotional desires, predilections and prejudices.

Mr. Roosevelt gives me the impression that he can really believe what he wants to believe, really think what he wants to think and really remembers what he wants to remember to a greater extent than anyone I have ever known.

It is always dangerous to attempt to interpret the emotional motivation in another human being; it is difficult enought to interpret one's own. Nevertheless, since Mr. Roosevelt is so largely governed by his emotions, it becomes highly important to try to understand as much as possible what sort of emotional drive supplies the motive power behind his actions.

Knowing that I am here indulging not only in hypothesis, but in a perfectly obvious oversimplification, I should say that Mr. Roosevelt is motivated primarily by two desires: the desire "to do good," and the desire "to be liked and admired."

In Mr. Roosevelt there is, I think, a real humanitarian desire to make life more pleasant, or at least more bearable, to the greatest possible number of people. In Mr. Roosevelt there is likewise, if I am not mistaken, an intellectual realization that neither he nor any other human being can do very much in this direction. The conflict of the desire which would like to do much, and the intellectual realization that there is but little that can be done results, in Mr. Roosevelt, in a feverish assertion of the desire in the shape of an unfulfillable promise.

And the more his mind tells him that he is promising the impossible, the more vehemently Mr. Roosevelt is driven by his desire to reaffirm and amplify the promise.

It is this inner conflict which—as I see it—makes a travesty of Mr. Roosevelt's attempts at leadership, and which renders him incapable of following any consistent course—except the course of seeking the maximum of popular approval.

• • • •

THE leader of a democracy such as ours must, to be sure, carry out the will of the people, but he cannot do this by trying to please all of the people all of the time, any more than he can "fool all of the people all of the time." Mr. Roosevelt's desire to be liked and admired has led him—and will, I fear, continue to lead him—to try to please all of the people all of the time by compromising where he should dig in and fight.

Mr. Roosevelt, because he wants to be pleasant and agreeable to everyone, does not realize that there are some things on which no compromise is possible.

The sanctity of a promise, for example, can only be preserved intact or destroyed. One is a person whose word can be relied on—or one is not.

Before stating my conclusion in answer to our fourth and last question, there is one other point in the President's individuality which seems to me worth touching upon.

You will remember Mr. Lippmann said of the President that "his mind is not very clear, his purposes are not simple and his methods are not direct."

We have discussed the reasons why his mind is "not very clear;" we have seen why his "purposes are not simple"—because both his mind and his purposes are dominated by his necessarily ever-shifting concept of what will make him popular and what will make him feel that he is "doing good."

But we have not yet considered why his "methods are not direct."

I am not sure that I know. I think it is partly because of the absence of any clear goal or plan, but I also think it is more than that. I think Mr. Roosevelt has a definite liking for the devious as opposed to the direct, for the complicated as opposed to the simple and for the masked flanked attack as opposed to the direct frontal assault.

He has this liking, I think, because it makes him feel superior to make everyone think he is going to do one thing and then do another. That is being "smart" or "clever."

To feint at the center and then launch an attack upon the enemy's unsuspecting flank is, of course, what every good general will do. It is good tactics.

The trouble is that Mr. Roosevelt—as I see it—is not a good general. He is an excellent tactician; he can and does frequently conceal his real movement under a most convincing sham attack; but the trouble is that he conceals it not only from the enemy but from his own corps commanders and general staff. Sometimes, I think, he even conceals it from himself.

An excellent example of this was furnished by Mr. Roosevelt's hectic maneuvers in regard to the recent tax proposals, which left no one more hopelessly confused than Senators Harrison and Robinson, his own leaders in the Senate, whose actions he repudiated.

• • • •

ALL this is simply saying in another way what I have said before. Since Mr. Roosevelt as a general has no definite plan of campaign and no definite objective—except the desire to be acclaimed a great general—he tends to lead his troops in a series of brilliant tactical maneuvers, which would certainly often "outwit" the enemy, if there were a definite enemy, and which would enable him probably to gain his objective—if he had an objective.

Thus it seems to me that "the desire to be clever" is a fault in Mr. Roosevelt, whereas, in a man less dominated by the passive desire for popularity and more activated by a definite striving toward an objective goal, it might be a great asset.

I am afraid that it is "the desire to be clever" that has led Mr. Roosevelt into some of his worst errors.

He thought he was being "clever" when he tried to satisfy the inflationists by letting them pass the "permissive" Thomas amendment to the original agricultural act, rather than taking a firm stand against greenbacks.

He thought he was being "clever" when he made the first of his many compromises with the so-called "Silver Bloc."

He thought he was being "clever" when he tried to steal Huey Long's thunder by suddenly coming out with his "soak the rich" tax message.

None of these, and countless similar actions, were really "clever" or "smart," because they were all ineffective in satisfying the "radical" groups or individuals whom they were supposed to satisfy, and, on the other hand, definitely led Mr. Roosevelt to go much further in the various directions desired by the "radicals" than he originally had any idea or intention of going.

And so my answer to our fourth and last question is this:

I think Mr. Roosevelt's nature is such as to make him, in the sense of party politics, an ideal popular candidate for office, but an ineffective and dangerous incumbent, once he is elected.

And further, I think that those qualities of showmanship rather than statesmanship, which Mr. Roosevelt possesses and which may have been useful in the winter of 1932-33, are certainly not the qualities which will be needed in the White House from here on.

Postmaster Is Held For Stamp Shortage

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., Sept. 15.—John H. Washinger, suspended assistant postmaster at the Chambersburg office, was released under $5,000 bond for United States court at Scranton yesterday following a hearing before United States Commissioner Shirley J. Zarger on charges of embezzling $4,210.

Postal Inspector Smith said a shortage in the stamp stock was discovered August 6, when he and D. T. Lenor made an inspection. He said Washinger admitted falsifying reports to the Postoffice Department to cover up the shortage.

SUPPOSE you are the publisher of a newspaper, and in a department store in town, the very one which pays you one-quarter of your advertising revenue, an elevator cable breaks and four people are killed in the falling car. Would you spread that item of news under a two-column head on the front page, or give it half a dozen lines of copy back in a dim corner of page 23, or omit it altogether?

Suppose that you and your co-owners of the paper possess a quarter-million dollars' worth of stock in the local electric light company and a professor at some college in town makes a speech in which he supports with eloquence and acumen the theory of public ownership of utilities. What does your paper do about that story?

Suppose that you firmly believe that the Soviets are the very essence of devilishness, and that your Moscow correspondent sends you one of his daily cables in which he mentions that the new apartment houses in Moscow are as nice as anything short of Park avenue in this country, with flats renting for a sum which wouldn't secure two rooms in the Bowery, and also that the corn crop has failed in a province down by the Black Sea. Which of these items is the one you play up in copy and headline?

There is no surprise in the fact that questions precisely like these, or resembling them, have to be solved every day in the year on every newspaper in the country. And from the general tenor of the solutions, there is no surprise in the observable fact that most people don't go around hitting themselves on the head with a hammer.

And finally you come to the query—ought papers to be "people?"

• • • •

THEY ought not, implies Georges Seldes in his lively, somewhat incoherently accusative volume, "Freedom of the Press" (Bobbs-Merrill, $2.75). To his credit, he is not the kind of a man who goes back in the rear pew and mumbles to himself. The rambunctious correspondent and author of "You Can't Print That!" "Can These Things Be?" and "Iron, Blood and Profits" enjoys speaking out, and I'm one to say we enjoy it with him. Just as spectacle, for example, do you see the Associated Press and the New York Times spanked in print very often?

From his own quarter-century of newspaper work and the reminiscences of dozens of newspaper friends and the files of papers open to everybody, Mr. Seldes has drawn up a bill of indictment against the press' version of truth. His point, understand him, is not to attack the lie direct—that is pretty rare. But the comfortable lie of omission—ah, that is a very different matter!

Let me give you an instance from Mr. Seldes' chapter—"Crash, Panic and Press"—on a topic which no one can say is of mere minor or local interest. Take the collapse of the country's banks just before the inauguration in 1933. As late as March 2 that was but news for page 19 to the New York Herald Tribune, where it mentioned moratoria in six States. On page 23 the American referred to a "financial muddle," and page 8 of the Times spoke of "Banks protected (sic) in five more States." On the very night before the "holiday" the New York Post alone thought the front page was the place for an inkling of the fact that 30 States had limited their banking operations. Let the New Yorker go on with the tale: "The next day, astonished New Yorkers saw across the very front pages of their papers that hell had broken loose even in their own dear State. The policy of pussy-footing, hitherto unexcelled as a national tonic, had collapsed." Observes Mr. Seldes sharply: "What good, then, did it do the press, which undoubtedly meant well, to keep the truth from the public?"

And echo alone can answer.

• • • •

THESE curious reticences, and similar colorings and soft-pedalings of the news, exist in newspaperdom simply because the powers in charge happen to be human beings, with human likes and dislikes, fears and interests. The reader must not think this state of affairs constitutes the whole story of his breakfast front page—after all, Mr. Seldes had to do a lot of research to find his edged examples. But when he rallies us on the imperfections of the fourth estate, it is really with sorrow that we are not ideal.

You have the crux of the problem there—how to be ideal though human. Yet until the denatured world actually arrives, it seems to me that the pure "freedom of the press" must remain a will-o'-the-wisp. Until that time I confess that I don't know what pure freedom means. And I expect that I'll know even less about it then.

The Once Over

By

H. I. Phillips

OSCAR ERPS, 36, white, broker.—Mr. Erps thinks a horn is a brake, a crime permit, a musical instrument and an alibi in any difficulty. He has driven automobiles for 18 years and has had his thumb on the button for 17½. Mr. Erps is a gracious and kindly gentleman at home, but an overbearing and inconsiderate Mr. Hyde behind a steering wheel. He thinks an unholy disturbance will close a drawbridge, clear up a traffic jam, change red to green and intimidate man or beast. Turns in his old car every time a model comes out with a more annoying horn.

• • • •

Jarvis Tipsbuttock, 24, white, illustrator.—A curious fellow, Jarvis. When the caution light goes on immediately preceding the top light, he blows his horn fiercely with a "You can't do that to me" note and in the course of a day's driving endangers two or three dozen lives to save about 11 minutes net.

• • • •

Godfrey Ephets, 41, white, salesman.—Uses horn as a clarion note, a bugle call, a summons, a tocsin and a community greeting. Is the kind of man who would get a kick out of wearing squeaky shoes in a library and taking snare-drum lessons next door to an institution for nervous disorders.

• • • •

Cosgrave Whipplemonk, white, 22, college student.—Cosgrave, as a child, liked to sneak up behind nurse and bust an inflated paper bag in her ear. He now finds an outlet for his curious obsessions in a car equipped with three types of horn and a bell.

• • • •

Hamilton Crockett, 36, white, public accountant.—We can best describe Hamilton by telling you that he once bought a car with bad brakes, a defective engine and clutch trouble without making any protest, but sued the maker when he found the horn was inadequate.

• • • •

Olivia Bennerts, 26, white, dressmaker.—Miss Bennerts can't stand the idea of any vehicles ahead of her, stationary or moving. She thinks it intolerable to be delayed by flood, fire, quake or hurricane, or traffic signal. Carries a siren stolen from a hose wagon but thinks it too soft.

• • • •

McChesters Follinsbaum, white, 60, leader in a Stop-Unnecessary-Noises-Movement. — Has car equipped with a fog horn taken off a steamship. It goes off automatically at 20-second intervals. McChesters also leaves his radio on all night, and puts firecrackers under his grandmother's bed.

On The Air Today

Never an idle moment on the airways these days.

Tonight's premiere brings Grace Moore back to an admiring radio audience. It really is a resumption of her recitals of last winter. This fall, however, she will be heard as an actress as well as a songstress, for between vocal selections she will participate in dramatizations of events based on actual experiences of her spectacular rise from singer in a Tennessee church choir to a member of the Metropolitan Opera.

For her first program (WRC, 8:30 p. m.) Miss Moore will be heard in six selections, "Through the Years," "Can't You Hear Me Calling, Caroline," Last Rose of Summer," "Musetta Waltz," "Love Me Forever" and "Estrellita."

"Love Me Forever," as most everyone knows, is from her last motion picture by the same title.

John Erskine is regarded as one of America's great novelists. But few persons, no doubt, would think of him as a pianist. Yet Mr. Erskine is president of the Juilliard Graduate School of Music—and will be presented as piano soloist with the Musical Art Quartet in the first of four Music Guild programs scheduled for this week. Edward MacDowell, noted composer, considered Erskine his most promising piano pupil. But his literary activities relegated piano playing to the hobby realm. He plays today (WMAL, at 1:30 p. m.) Schumann's quintet for piano and strings.

• • • •

Odette, star entertainter of "Evening in Paris," also introduces a new talent in her show tonight (WMAL, at 7:30). She will play a violin solo, "Zigeuner." And also will sing a tune from a Charlot's Revue of several years ago, "I Don't Know." The Pickens Sisters will "bear down" on "Mama Inez."

• • • •

The Italian-Ethiopian crisis will be analyzed by Daniele Vare, Italian Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, who speaks from New York this evening (WRC at 10 p. m.) . . . CBS's speaker of note for the day is Jouett Shouse, who talks on "Breathing Spells" (WJSV at 10 p. m.). Mr. Shouse is president of the American Liberty League.

• • • •

Conrad Nagel and Judith Anderson are co-starred in this week's Radio Theater production of "Leah Kleschna" (WJSV at 8 p. m.). Nagel delayed one week sailing for Europe in order to make this appearance. Miss Anderson is starred in the current Broadway production of "The Old Maid" and is making one of her infrequent microphone appearances.

• • • •

Another outstanding personality of the American stage, Eva Le Gallienne, makes a mike appearance today, and like Miss Anderson, a rare occasion. Mary Madison will interview Miss Le Gallienne in "The Little House" (WJSV at 3 p. m.) Six plays of the Le Gallienne season's repertoire will be discussed.

• • • •

Art Godfrey has taken a fancy these days to a recording by the Hoosier Hot Shots. Whenever a request comes in at the WJSV switchboard for it, the girl writes a note to Godfrey: "Request for the record by 'Who's Your Hot Shot.'" As a good Indianian, I cheer the opportunity to spell out the quaint colloquialism by which we often are identified. Anyway, it amuses Godfrey no end.

• • • •

NBC will be present at the opening exercises of the Veterans of Foreign Wars convention in New Orleans (WMAL at 11 a. m.) Gov. Allen and Mayor Walmsley will talk for the home precincts, and Senator Nye heads the visitors to be heard.

U. S. Judge McClintic Recovers in Hospital

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 15.—Federal Judge George W. McClintic, of Charleston, W. Va., is recovering from a major operation at the University of Virginia Hospital. Judge McClintic, who is 69, was admitted to the hospital September 7. It is not expected that he will be able to leave for two weeks or more.

He was appointed to the United States District Court, Southern District, West Virginia, by President Harding in 1921—and has since been associated with the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Spotsylvania Girl Weds.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 15.—Miss Helen Blanche Berry, of Spotsylvania County, was married in St. Mary's Catholic Church to Gerald P. Daugherty, of Newport, Del. After a bridal trip, Mr. and Mrs. Daugherty will live at Langley Field, where the bridegroom is stationed.

West Virginia Democratic Rift Widens

Defections of Cornwell, Bumgardner Worry Party Leaders.

Young Members Will Seek to Heal Breach at Convention.

By Robert H. Horner.
A Special Correspondent.

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 15.—With three of their old-time party leaders definitely against the New Deal, Democrats of West Virginia are beginning to worry lest others may follow, and that soon the factional differences which now beset them may widen into different party alignments.

Fears over this prospect arose during the week from a speech delivered at Beckley, by J. Lewis Bumgardner, who was a Roosevelt delegate to the last Democratic National Convention and later voted for the President in the electoral college. Bumgardner delivered a general assault upon the New Deal and asserted that permanent adoption of the President's policies meant departure from fundamental national principles.

Scarcely had Bumgardner's words spread over the State, than John J. Cornwell, known as the "popular war-time Governor" of West Virginia, now general counsel for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, spoke before a gathering of transportation men at Wheeling and delivered what was generally regarded as a veiled attack upon the national Administration.

Davenport Flays New Deal.

Preceding these two attacks, there came unexpectedly from Henry B. Davenport, of Charleston, long an active party leader and financial backer, a statement, repudiating the President's main policies.

All three men are outstanding in West Virginia's Democracy, particularly Cornwell, who has one of the largest followings in the State.

This background, together with the split between Gov. Kump and Senator M. M. Neely, will follow the Young Democratic Club of West Virginia when it goes to Bluefield for its annual two-day convention September 27 and 28.

The young Democrats are perturbed over the situation and at Bluefield will attempt to wipe out the split, and, if possible, regain losses which have come as the result of the breaking away of the three leaders.

Union in Background.

It is believed here that the chief difficulty in the way of healing the Kump-Neely breach is that in order to do so Neely would have to forsake his chief backers—John L. Lewis, national president, and Van A. Bittner, of Charleston, district 17 president, of the United Mine Workers of America. The bitter attacks upon the Governor delivered by these two men are still ringing in the ears of the conservative Democrats, and it is known that Gov. Kump would never join them in any move. It is said that the union leaders have virtually forced the Governor to run against Neely for the Senate nomination next May.

Neely's friends are disclaiming any connection between him and the Lewis and Bittner speeches, which contained praise for him while denouncing the Governor. They say that the Senator was embarrassed by his backers, but he is helpless to do anything about it if he wants to retain the union labor vote.

Gov. Kump is said to be considering the results of propaganda over the State demanding that he call an extra session of the Legislature to enact laws to conform with the Federal social security act. Attorney General Homer A. Holt is making an investigation of the Federal laws with a view of determining whether a special session will be necessary before next May. To call a session before the spring primary, many believe, would prove to be too political to accomplish any worth-while results.

Some of those favoring an extra session, say that it is necessary to pass laws to make provision for the municipalities to support themselves. Virtually all of the cities in the State are in debt and are short on current revenues, and, it is said, some of them will have to do without many important functions unless a way is provided to raise revenue.

Grandson Due to Follow Route Of Lee to Antietam Ceremony

Son of McClellan Also Is Expected at Sharpsburg Rites Tomorrow.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 15.—The same route over which his illustrious grandfather led his Confederat Army in reaching the battlefield at Antietam on the morning of September 17, 73 years ago, will be followed by Dr. George Bolling Lee Tuesday in reaching Sharpsburg, where he will be one of the guests of honor at the dinner commemorating the anniversary of that engagement.

And if George B. McClellan, son of the Union Army commander in chief at that battle, accepts the invitation to attend the dinner, he, too, will traverse the same route taken by his father in reaching Sharpsburg. The committee arranging for the dinner was awaiting word from McClellan today before announcing the entire program for the occasion.

Dr. Lee will go by motor car from his summer home at Fairfax, Va., to Point of Rocks, Md., where he will be met by a reception committee and motorcycle escort. The party will then proceed to Frederick.

Parade Planned.

If Gen. McClellan's son comes, he will leave Washington shortly before noon Tuesday, to be met by a motorcycle escort and reception committee at the District line and will likewise proceed to Frederick, where thde two parties will combine and proceed to this city.

An hour's reception will follow a parade from the city limits, headed by an Army band. The reception is to be held at the Hotel Alexander.

Stopping at the Washington Confederate Cemetery in Rose Hill Cemetery on the route to Sharpsburg, it is planned to have George McClellan place a wreath there, while at the National Cemetery at Sharpsburg, Dr. Lee will place a wreath in the cemetery where thousands of soldiers who died while opposing the army of his grandfather, lie buried.

The party will make a tour of the battlefield with Maj. Joseph W. Byron ,of Hagerstown, a student of the movements of the two armies at Antietam, explaining these to the party.

Dinner Scheduled.

A dinner will be given at 6:30 p. m. at the Community Hall at Sharpsburg, with officials of the Department of Interior and National Park Service taking a prominent part. The battlefield was formerly under the supervision of the War Department, but several years ago this supervision was transferred to the Interior Department.

Two men who became Presidents of the United States fought at the battle of Antietam. They were Col. Rutherford B. Hayes, who at 18 was a commissary sergeant, and was recommended for a commission by Col. Hayes because of gallantry in action.

It was on October 1, just 13 days following the battle, that President Lincoln visited Gen. McClellan, who was still encamped on the field of battle. The President was accompanied by John W. Garrett, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, Mr. Kennedy, superintendent of the cencus, Marshal Lamon, of the District of Columbia, and others. They came by railroad to Frederick, and rode the remaining 20 miles to the battlefield in an Army ambulance, while in this vicinity, Lincoln visited many of the wounded in hospitals.

State Counts On $1,500,000 For Schools

Virginia Expects WPA to Aid Beautification of Grounds.

Gullies Will Be Filled and Shrubs Planted, Says Hall.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 15.—School buildings and grounds throughout Virginia will be beautified in the coming winter months if PWA authorities approve plans for spending $1,500,000 of work-relief funds to employ unskilled and semiskilled workmen on the project.

Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, said today he and Raymond Long, building division director of the department, had received encouragement for the proposal from officials whom they had interviewed in Washington.

These authorities, Dr. Hall said, had told Virginia educators that the project was of the kind most favored by work-relief leaders, as it employed the types of labor that predominate on relief rolls.

The project, which has been approved by WPA Director William A. Smith here, was submitted in blanket form in order to meet the early deadline set for all applications.

He and his co-workers are engaged now, Dr. Hall said, in preparing allocations for each county in the State, based on the estimate county school leaders make of the funds needed in their territory.

Under present tentative plans, gullies and other irregularities on school grounds will be leveled and shrubs planted. Buildings will be repaired to the extent to which unskilled and semiskilled laborers are capable of such work as painting and simple carpentering.

No estimate is available yet, Dr. Hall said, as to the number of men to be used, but those employed on the project, if it is approved, will probably be kept busy throughout the winter.

Acautl payment of pensions may not start until December 1, it was said. The county commissioners have levied $10,000 for the purpose, but the State is not yet ready to match county funds. The maximum the county can spend in the first 12 months was said to be $30,000.

Dam Project Nearly Done At Piney Run

Completion of Spillways and Overflow Units Is Due Soon.

80 Million Capacity of Reservoir Will Solve Frostburg Problem.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fronsburg, Md., Sept. 15.—The spillway and overflow sections of the $100,000 dam at Piney Run, a Pwa project, which will be the final link in Frontburg's new $225,000 water system are rapidly being completed. Forty acres will be inundated and assurance is given that Frostburg will have virtually a neverfailing water supply. The dam will have a capacity of 80,000,000 gallons which will be used as a reserve supply. In the past, the city has faced serious water shortages in drought periods.

The Piney Run project was sanctioned by the State Board of Health. The Legislature authorized a $200,000 bond issue and of that amount $85,000 was spent in laying mains from the top of Big Savage Mountain to Piney Run, repairing the old reservoir and installing a pumping station. The next step in the new system was the building of a new filtration plant at a cost of $40,000, which will filter 1,000,000 gallons a day, while the estimated daily consumption of the city is 600,000 gallons.

Piney Run dam is located in Garrett County, about 10 miles west of Frostburg.

They say that old fashions come back. This is not strictly so. New fashions remind us of certain old ones. For example, Baratowne Ties remind you of fine old Barathea weaves. But their stripes remind you of nothing you have ever seen before. Their price is an old-fashioned one, one dollar.

Gallico

Finds Gridders Now Train Like Prize Fighters

By Paul Gallico,
A Special Correspondent.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Sept. 15. This department is bound at the moment for a football camp in the mountain fastnesses of Pennsylvania, wher the Pittsburgh University football team is in training for the 1935 season. Nowadays all the high-pressure football teams go away and train like prize fighters for two or three weeks before the college season opens.

Formerly they used to train by playing setups for the first two or three games, but the schedules are all too tough now. The schools start right out with real opponents in the first or second games. Matriculation week isn't enough. Most of the preliminary work now is done in the spring. Three weeks in camp in the fall serve to harden up the muscles and get the team in shape. Thereafter it needs only drill and practice.

Last year I intimated that the Pittsburgh boys were playing for a combination of Alma Mammy and the First National Bank, or whatever financial institution it is that holds the mortgage on the big Pitt Stadium. The football bowl was a civic venture in which many small depositors invested. Only big games will fill it, and only many fillings will pay off the debt.

To fill the bowl—any bowl—it takes a football team. In order to make a football team, you have to have football players. The percentage of good players in any student body is relatively low. Therefore you must get them from somewhere. The story is the same the country over. The depression did it. Many a school that would like to ease up on high-pressure football, but can't because the stadium bonds must be paid off.

PITT maintains that her football players are bona fide students who can read and write and who attend class. Do you think that's funny I could cite you a couple of schools where some of the football players couldn't. Anyway, Bill McClintock, jr., of Harrisburg, invited me to come to camp and meet the boys personally.

I have never been to a football camp before. It ought to be an experience. Thence to Pompton Lakes for Joe Louis and the next day to Speculator to feel Max Baer's muscles. I told you I was going to pick Baer, didn't I? Well, I am.

William Lawson Little's winning of his fourth straight amateur golf championship is being called, I note, the greatest feat in golf. Also they are saying that Little would have beaten Bob Jones the best day Jones ever saw. It would have been a pretty fair match to see, a pretty fair match. I think Little is one of the finest golfers I have ever watched. But I am going to wait until he spread-eagles a couple of open fields before I ticket him as greater than Mr. Bob.

Mr. Bob used to make those professionals roll over and do the same kind of tricks that he put the amateurs through. His grand slam is still the world's finest achievement in competitive golf. Lawson Little's little slam is the best thing of its kind and the greatest strictly amateur performance.

But that doesn't mean that the Californian can't pass Jones. It's just a question of time. He now

16,000 Watch Griff Streak Snapped

Ex-Virginia U. Ace Bows in Opener After Foe Runs Up Big Lead.

Capital Youth Gives 13 Hits in Finale, but Fans Six Rivals.

By Shirley Povich.

THAT winning streak of the Nats is no more. Sixteen thousand unbelieving fans who had heard tell of the late-season feats of the Washington Club and who comprised the largest crowd since the opening game, were still unbelieving after what happened yesterday. They saw the Nats play in midseason form and take two beatings from the Cleveland Indians.

The day was given over by Manager Harris to experimentation with two of his rookie pitchers. He unveiled for public approval first Orlin Rogers, and then Dick Lanahan. They met only with the approval of the Indians, who feasted greedily on their offerings and collected a pair of victories by scores of 16 to 4 and 6 to 3.

Rogers Hard Hit.

The more tolerant among the 16,000 are still reserving opinions on Rogers, the little University of Virginia left-hander. They didn't see much of him. He left under duress in the third inning after being a party to six Cleveland runs in the first game, but Washington errors besmirched four of those runs.

Lanahan was not unimpressive, despite the 13 hits and 5 runs the local boy who made good with Chattanooga yielded in the second game before a bruised finger on his pitching hand which had contacted a line-drive by Hughes forced him to quit. He had a fast ball that accounted for six srtike-outs and he was never in deep distress.

But most of the 16,000 who saw Kid Estallella, the Nats' Cuban third baseman in action for the first time, were not impressed. Esty was the particular target of the Indians, who amassed 20 hits in the first game and safeties whistled by him frequently as the 16,000 sighed for the return of Ossie Bluege. Once, Estallella cut loose a wild throw that gave the Indians a run. He was benched in the second game.

No two rookies ever faced a more forbidding assignment in their big league debut than did Rogers and Lanahan. Opposed to them were Cleveland's ace right-handers, Willis Hudlin and Mel Harder, who breezed to victory in the comforts of huge leads presented them in the early innings.

Rogers Pounded Out.

In that first game, young Orlin Rogers was deeply impressed by big league hitting, or should have been. The Indians rapped him for four solid hits in the first inning to take a 2-0 lead and were still swinging violently when Rogers was humanely removed by Manager Harris with two more Indian runs across and two still on base.

But Rogers can take consolation in the fact that he was no worse than two of the Nats' veteran pitchers. In fact, in contrast to Ed Linke and Leon Pettit, who followed him to the mound, the former University of Virginia left-hander was a rousing success.

Linke's entrance into the game in the third inning was saluted by Ed Phillips with a whistling double to center that scored two runs and put the Injuns in a 6-2 lead and, after permitting two more runs in the fifth, Linke was in the process of yielding an additional five when Pettit relieved him in the sixth. Pettit was a party to that five-run uprising and gave up three more runs in later innings.

Nats Make Five Errors.

Five Washington errors didn't help matters for the Nats' pitchers. In fact, those four runs the Indians scored off Rogers and Linke in the third inning were as unearned as the Prince of Wales. station in life. Red Kress' town-lot fumble of Hughes' grounder started the Tribe's rally.

The folks at the lower end of the Indians' batting order, namely A. B. Wright and Eddie Phillips, were the chief offenders against the Washington pitching, each contributing four hits, each making two doubles.

While the Indians were scoring in clusters, the Nats were trifling with one run rallies against Willis Hudlin. That kind of plodding found 'em traling 6-2 in the third inning, 8-3 in the fifth, 13-3 in the sixth, 14-4 in the seventh, and ultimately 16 to 4.

Two Runs in First.

Presented with a floral horseshoe by officials of the NRA Athletic Association for which he pitched last year, Lanahan took the mound in the second game and found himself trailing, 2-0, in the first inning after getting two out. A double by Averill, a walk to Vosmik and singles by Hale and Trosky produced the runs.

It was 3-0 after the third when Averill pounded a homer over the right-field wall and then the Nats got back in the ball game after being held hitless by Harder for trree innings. They cut the lead to 3-2 when Stone, Myer, Travis and Powell produced singles.

While Harder was holding the Nats to one hit during the next three innings, the Indians picked up single runs in the sixth and seventh as Lanahan permitted two hits in each inning. Washington's final hopes expired in the eighth after Pinch-Hitter Miles and Joe Kuhel singled with none out for an auspicious start. But the concentrated strength of the Nats' batting order was easy for Harder, who confined the rally to one run.

Hot Springs, Va., Sept. 15.—The Nation's outstanding golfers will test the Cascades course's tough par 71 in the Cascades Open golf championship here Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Although the best amateurs who have struggled over the beautiful, mountain-cupped course have found old man par a difficult opponent, the professionals will find an even stiffer course when they start play Thursday.

There will be $2,500 in prize money at stake and the cash lure has attracted an outstanding entry list, including such stars as Craig Wood, Leo Diegel, Bobby Cruickshank, Henry Cooper, Denny Shute, Ed Dudley, Sam Parks, the National Open champion; Tommy Armour, Al Espinosa, Billy Burke, Johnny Fischer, Abe Espinosa and a host of lesser lights.

Yankees Rally To Win Over Tigers, 8-7

Take Last Encounter With Foes; Now 8½ Games Behind Lead.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—The Yankees had their final crack at Detroit's American League lead today when they staged a stirring comeback after a five-run Tiger blast in the third and won their final encounter with the pace-setters, 9 to 7, before 19,789 Sunday fans.

Despite the victory the Yanks came out on the short end of a 3-2 count for the series and found themselves in the almost hopeless position of being 8½ games behind two weeks before the close of the season. The teams split their 22 encounters for the year.

Fordham Johnny Murphy did a superb job of relief hurling to earn his eighth triumph of the season after Vito Tamulis had been belted out in the third. He personally conducted the winning runs across the plate in the eighth when he doubled to send home the tying counter then scored with the deciding run on Red Rolfe's single.

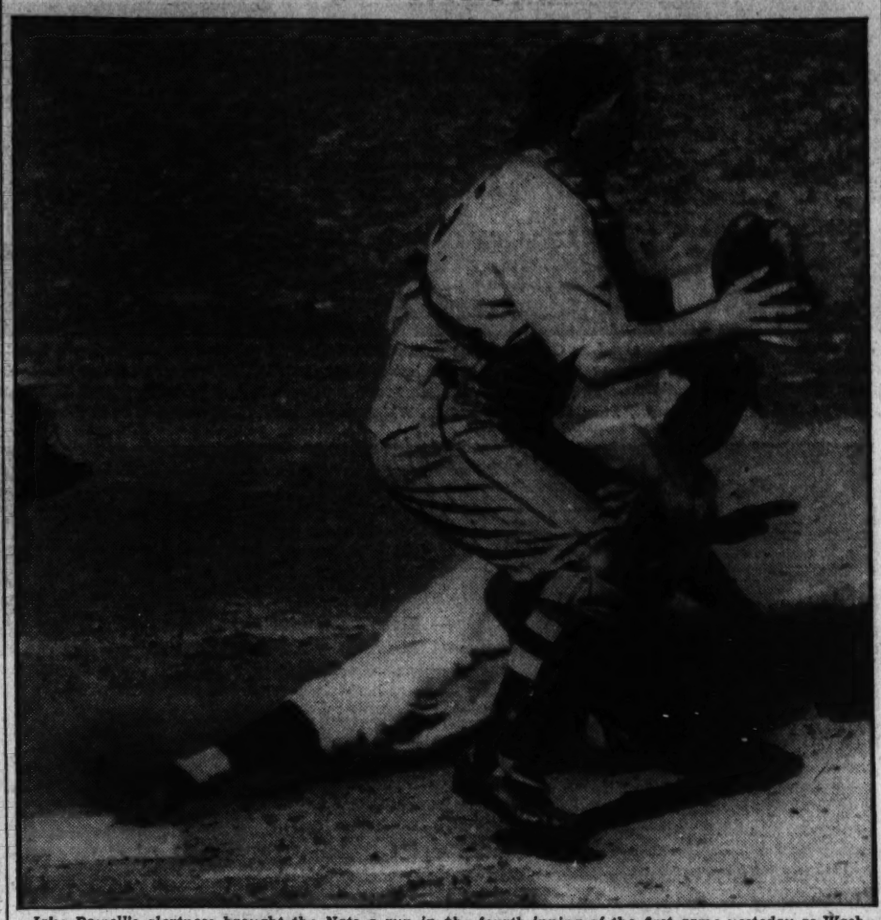
Powell Scores Useless Run for Nats



Jake Powell's alertness brought the Nats a run in the fourth inning of the first game yesteday as Washington absorbed a 16-4 beating from the Indians. Powell is seen scoring as Catcher Ed Phillips waits in vain for the ball. When Averill's return throw of Bolton's fly trickled through the infield, Powell dashed boldly home from second base.

Cumberland Host To School Coaches

Rules to Be Discussed at Meeting Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 15.—High school football coaches and officials of Western Maryland and neighboring sections of West Virginia and Pennsylvania will meet here Tuesday night todiscuss the 1935 rules. Most of the squads of high schools in this section already are hard at work and opening games are scheduled during the coming week.

Several changes in high school coaching ranks have been made for this year. Dana Lough moved from Keyser, (W. Va.) High to Potomac State College is the most important change.

New coaches in the section are Sidney Hale, Romney; Homer Fizer, Keyser; William Hahn, Peidmont High, and Herman Ball, Ridgeley.

Old coaches back are Bert Harbert, Allegany; Pat Conway, La-Salle; Bobby Cavanaugh, Penn Avenue; Eddie McVicker, Hyndman; Myrl Kepner, Parsons; Dyke Raese, Davis; Emil Suder, Thomas; R. J. Douglass, Moorefield; Cleland Bergdoll, Petersburg; Tom Rankin, Franklin; William A. Schwarzkopf, Deaf School; Eddie Semler, Hagerstown, and John C. Cobourn, Martinsburg.

Hale Assumes Duties As Coach at Romney

Romney, W. Va., Sept. 15.—Sidney Hale, former Ohio State athlete, has begun his duties as head coach of the Romney High School squad. Hale played on the Ohio State team in 1933 and last year aided in coaching the Buckeye elevens.

His prospects here are promising for the year with a large group of regulars and reserves from the 1934 team present. The new coach is building his team around McCauley, center; Haines, end; Nealis, fullback, and Singhass, end. All of them were stars last year.

Par Golf Wins Calvert for Ghezzi

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 15.—Victor Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., professional, won the Maryland Open golf championship here today, firing a pair of 70s for par scores in the morning and afternoon rounds.

Ghezzi's score for the 72 holes was 71—71—70—70—282, three better than the runner up, Gene Kunes, of Norristown, Pa.; Ed Dudley, Philadelphia, Pa., fired his way out of a three-way tie at the half-way mark to clinch third-place honors. Kunes registered 285, with Dudley 2 strokes behind him.

Spencer Overton, local shotmaker, rounded the course for a 296 and the best amateur mark.

Ghezzi's prize money amounted to $750, Kunes won $500, with Dudley's share of the $2,500 pot totaling $350.

Art Straub, of Brielle, N. J., who scored a 69 on the par 70 course on the opening day of the match, and was tied for second with Kunes at the half-way point yesterday, ran into difficulties today and dropped far in the van for a 295.

Tied for fourth were Jimmy Thompson, of Ridgewood, N. J., and Chandler Harper, Norfolk, Va., each registering a score of 289.

Red Sox Rally Downs Browns; Grove Victor

Boston, Sept. 15 (AP).—Led by "Dusty" Cooke, the Boston Red Sox overcame a 5-run, first-inning splurge by St. Louis to beat the Brown, 9 to 5, today and help Lefty Grove record his eighteenth victory of the season.

Cooke batted in three runs in the Sox's big six-run sixth inning, and was passed in the eighth inning by Caldwell, third visiting moundsman, with the bases full, forcing in another run.

After the first inning Grove allowed only four hits, and Rhodes, who relieved him in the seventh inning, was not touched.

Suhr has played in 618 games, not missing one since September 11, 1931, although several times he has ployed but an inning, as he did today. Eddies Brown, formerly of the Boston Braves, established the record during the seasons from 1924 to 1928.

Night Grid Games At Harrisonburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 15.—Harrisonburg High will play its four games under the lights of the baseball field, Coach Claude Warren said today in announcing the schedule. Success of night baseball in the Valley League here this summer prompted the change to night football.

The Blue Streaks report for practice tomorrow.

Harrisonburg opens against Handley High at Winchester on October 4. On the following Friday the Blue Streaks journey to Charlottesville to meet Lane High.

Miller School, of Albemarle County, opens the home season here on October 18. On the next Friday, Harrisonburg plays its last game away from home. Then come the three big home games: Clifton Forge, November 1; Staunton, November 8, and Covington, November 22.

Giants Assault Dizzy to Win 3d in Row

Win, 7-3, to Shove Cards Farther From Lead; 41,284 Look On.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 15.—Before an overflow crowd of 41,284, the largest ever to witness a single regular season game in St. Louis, the New York Giants pounded Dizzy Dean and defeated the Cardinals for the third straight time today, 7 to 3.

The Cardinals were able to salvage only the first game of the important four-game series, during which the Giants knocked them out of the National League lead.

The Chicago Cubs, who benefited by the St. Louis defeats to go into first place, drew two full games ahead of the Cardinals by winning again today. The third-place Giants trail the Cards by only 1½ games.

W. & L., With Green Squad, Seen Facing Too Heavy Odds in Race

Team in Need Of Reserve Strength

16 of 31 Men Sophs; Offense to Be Built Around Ellis.

By Lewis F. Atchison.
A Staff Correspondent.

NIMROD HALL, Va., Sept. 15.—Bivouacked in this solitary mountain retreat, as cloistered as a Trappist monastery, Washington and Lee's football warriors yesterday completed girding their loins for what well may be one of the fiercest struggles for football supremacy in the school's history. It will be a bitter conflict to retain their newly won Southern Conference laurels and it appears after carefully weighing all the evidence in the case, a losing one. The odds are stacked too heavily against them.

The strongest and most damaging indictment against Head Coach "Tex" Tilson is the lack of seasoned material. Sixteen of a slim roster of 31 men are untried sophomores who may wilt under the fire of the Generals' powerful opponents. Man power is going to play an all-important role in the race for conference honors, and the Generals are wanting in this department.

Won't Make Prediction.

Tilson, quiet, pleasant and intensely earnest, does not venture a prediction on the outcome of the race. He tells you he would be only guessing since he hasn't seen the other squads, but he realizes that his task is gigantic—almost hopeless. Almost hopeless because Tilson does not recognize defeat. Underneath his outward calm burns a restless flame of hope—hope born of confidence in his men and himself.

Washington and Lee is going to have a strong argument in the debate for conference spoils in its first team, a big, rugged and smart aggregation with a line averaging more than 200 pounds. It is going to annoy all of its opponents considerably, but it can be bludgeoned into submission by a team of superior numbers because the Generals' reserve strength is almost negligible. The first team, for instance, looks just about as good as Maryland's at this writing, but the Terrapins outnumber W. and L. in reserves, two to one, and they appear to be better football players. Duke is understood to have three teams of equal merit, almost a fresh team for each period.

Too Much to Expect.

Thus, while the Generals, who meet both of these schools, can hold their own against the first, or starting teams, it isn't reasonable to expect them to withstand the assault and battering of fresh and equally capable reserves.

Tilson's offense will be built around Bill Ellis, the lanky end, whose splendid punting caught Maryland unawares two years ago, although the brunt of the attack will be borne by Capt. Jack Bailey, full back, and Joe Arnold, quarter back. He tells you that the lateral pass will not be emphasized, but his teams are noted for their deceptive attack and the lateral is conspicuously present during practice, so the opposition can look forward to plenty of them.

Ellis is invaluable in Tilson's scheme of things because he is a triple-threat man with natural kicking ability. He can pass and run from punt formation and undoubtedly will be the key man in deceptive maneuvers.

Juniors Counted On.

George Lowry, Al Moore and Wilt Sample, all juniors, are other backs who figure prominently in his plans. Moore, a triple-threater, probably will get a regular half back assignment, while the other berth will be shared by Lowry and Sample. Lowry's remarkable improvement has been heartening to Tilson, who thinks enough of him to give him as much work as Sample, a regular last year.

Reserve backs include Carleton Sharretts, full back; Lyle Benvenuti, half back; Earl Carson, quarter back, and R. W. Williams, jr., full back. Benvenuti, small and built close to the ground for speed, looks to be the most promising of the lot, but all show a lack of experience.

Washington and Lee's line shapes up as one of the strongest in the conference, with veterans available for every position. Perhaps the most invulnerable positions will be center and the tackles. Hugo Bonino 233 pounds, and "Tubby" Owings, 357, will handle the tackles and should do splendid work. Owings has been ailing, however, and has not reported for practice and necessarily will be off to a slow start.

Sophomore Is Ready.

If he should not be available in the earlier part of the campaign, Bob Spessard, sophomore prospect, 6 feet 7 inches tall, 222 pounds, will be ready to step into the line-up. Spessard is emerald green now, but a bit of personal attention from Tilson or "Cy" Young, his assistant, will help remove the sheen.

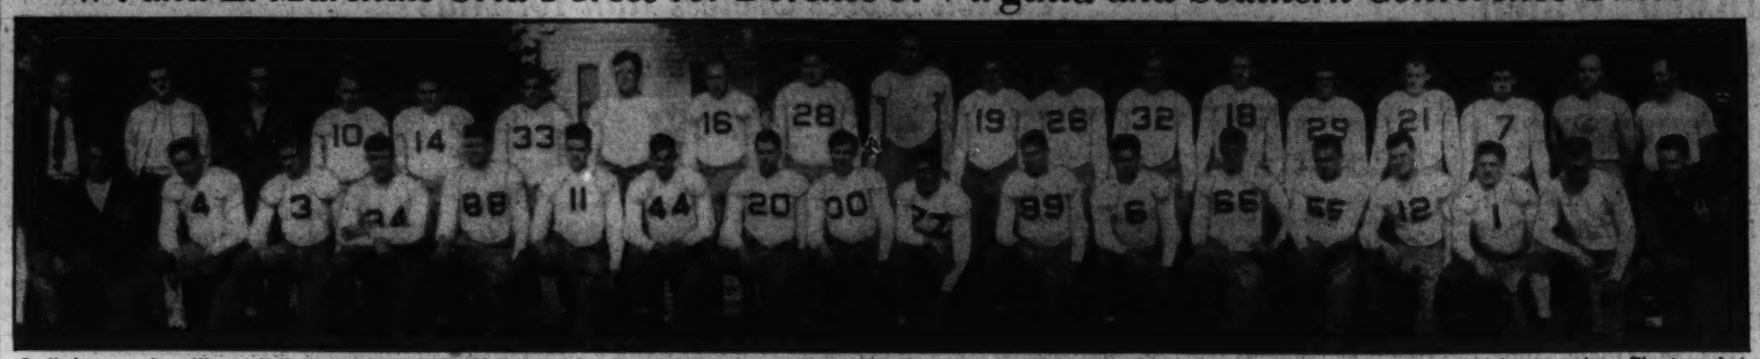
Charley Brasher, 180 pounds, will pair off with Ellis at the flanks, and W. and L. supporters can be assured of sufficient protection in this sector with this duo in the line-up. Porter Berry, 200 pounds, and Ed. Seitz probably will be installed in the guard positions, while the snapperback role will be entrusted to a sophomore, Dorsey Wilson, a 215-pound individual, with the bloom of a schoolboy in his cheeks and the courage of a lion in his heart.

One .. Best Prospects.

Tilson thinks Wilson is one of the best prospects on the squad. The lad loves football, and shone brilliantly with the freshmen last season. His work has improved noticeably since the squad has been in training. Another good prospect is Al Szymanski, a tackle from Yonkers, N. Y. Built as solidly as a brick wall and as smart as a new whip, Szymanski does not figure to be a bench warmer. He is almost certain to break into the regular line-up, and in a hurry.

So you can be assured that Washington and Lee is going to be a factor in conference affairs. It will have much to say about which team is going to wear the crown, but doesn't appear to have enough power to suppress the rebellion that is brewing.

W. and L. Marshals Grid Forces for Defense of Virginia and Southern Conference Titles



Preliminary work at Nimrod Hall, Va., finished, the Washington and Lee Generals have moved back to their Lexington campus to apply the finishing touches of the pre-season training campaign. The team last year won both the State and Southern Conference crowns. The squad, pictured above, left to right (kneeling), Assistant Coach Mitchell, Meeks, Fishback, Marchant, Williams, Robert White, Cox, Rogers, Arnold, Bailey, Lowry, Sharretts, Carson, Moore, Watts, Benvenuti, Assistant Freshman Coach Jones, Freshman Coach Bolan; (standing) Athletic Director Smith, Wilson, junior manager; Powell, senior manager; Anderson, Wilson, Berry, Dickinson, Brasher, Bonino, Spessard, Szymanski, Ellis, Jones, Young, John White, Sweet, Seitz, Head Coach Warren Tilson, and Assistant Coach Cy Young.

Head Coach Tilson (right) explains a play to George Lowry, regarded as a regular in the Generals' backfield.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Havre de Grace, Sept. 15.

Dear Al:

I believe I have touched on the subject before. I mean the practice of some of the shady owners of tip cards who perform what the turf people call "bulldogging." This consists of not offering a certain card for sale at the start of the races, and after, say, the fourth or fifth, when the results are known, printing the card with the winners thereon. Of course, it is necessary for the "bulldogger" to guess the last few. He passes out the card both inside and outside the track. His object is to boost the sale the next day. Yesterday one of the once-popular cards apparently was "bulldogged." Boys were distributing it and shouting its merits. But it seems that a rival card, which has a reputation for beng strictly on the level, was prepared for the slickers. This outfit had boys busy passing out a white card which had the word "fake" printed in large black letters. The "fake" card revealed the winners of the first four races with the notation that the card was printed after the results were known. It also gave a little resume of the tricks of the trade.

BILL.

First race—Green Mist is a juvenile with several good works in the speed book and seems fitted to escape the maiden ranks in a field of this sort. Breaks from the inside and may make every post a winning one. Footstep is highly thought of about the stable and should be in the thick of the chief going. Peace Move for the show.

Second race—Sunned defeated a fair field at Saratoga and comes to this race freshened. I see no reason for mistakes. Idle Victory is asked to carry only 99 pounds and has the rail position. May be dangerous. Petee Blue to take care of the others.

Third race—Miss Snow meets a cheap field here. She is not the most reliable filly in the world but capable of holding her own in this race. Jakovia, one of the half-mile stars, looms as the one to beat. Darkling did fairly well in New England and is dangerous.

Fourth race—The Vanderbilt entry of Speed and Balcony seems the best suited of anything named for this test. Speed is the speed of the party and he will have Fallon to do the booting. Anerold and Masked Girl to complete the money picture.

Fifth race—Xandra may be hard to beat on this course. This one starred in Maryland last spring and is getting good again. Needs only a good ride. Sablin's first race here was a beaut. Might click tomorrow. Red Badge for the minor reward.

Sixth race—Three Daggers ran a couple of nice races in New England. Meets only cheap ones here and a victory would not surprise me. Canimar and Sun Abbot for the place and show.

Seventh race—Sparky came down from New York in good form. Meets half-mile opposition and looks the part of a winner. Arab appeared to be gaining winning form in his tries over the small courses. Khelaboo is a possible surprise.

BUICK $350
1931 Sedan. Once in a great while we get into stock an almost too good to be true used car. This one was traded to us by a well-known Washington doctor. The car shows perfect care and mileage so low that it is almost unbelievable until you get behind the wheel and hear the smooth, quiet performance of its motor. Spotless original finish; good tires; good battery; relined brakes; not a dent or mark on its fenders or running gear; perfect chrome fixtures. This car is solid and sound from bumper to bumper. To the buyer who wants a good looking car in the most dependable condition, this beautiful unused used car is the answer. For a full price of only $350, this is the most outstanding value in our entire used-car stock. Famous money back guarantee, 30 days free service.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Yesterday and Tomorrow — By Harry J. Tuthill

DAYS AGO WHILE TRYING TO STOP SMOKE POURING OUT OF A ROCKET, GEORGE STARTED ON AN AIR CRUISE THAT LANDED HIM IN A DISTANT TOMORROW.
What, this the year 7324? I'm positive it's only 1935. Positive.
1935? Ha ha!
HAW HAW!
HA HA!
THEN THE DICTATRESS, CHLOE XIV, ARRANGED A WEDDING AND PURSUIT THAT BROUGHT AN OLD AND A NEW FIANCE FACE TO FACE IN A PERILOUS HIDING PLACE.
Ho, guards! This way! Up here is this scorpion!
Listen, get down or I'll....
DURING A ROUGH AND TUMBLE FIGHT, GEORGE HEARD A NOISE EVEN MORE DISTINCT THAN HIS OPPONENT'S THREATS.
Tarantula! Snake-in-the-grass, who glide between the Mogul of Mexico and his marriage to..
Listen! That noise! Hey, we're going up!
ANOTHER RECORD-BREAKING BROAD-JUMP IN TIME THAT WAS UNFORTUNATELY A LITTLE TOO SHORT, BROUGHT GEORGE BACK TO HIS FAMILY.
What, you say Mrs. Bungle moved out of this neighborhood years ago and that this is 1955?
1955? No, no! I, the Mogul of Mexico, say it is impossible.
